The elderly

Dear Edito

We ' to 'gratulate your newspaper and ani. Hodgen in particular on the really comprehensive coverage of the elderly in the Aug. 21 issue.

However, we do want to note just one correction. The Carmel Foundation was cited as having 700 people attending each day. Possibly we do have 700 people coming in each week, dropping in for classes, counseling, meals, programs, weekend teas and various other activities, but not 700 daily.

Once again, congratulations on a job well done and a real community service on the part of your newspaper.

Second kitchens

Dear Editor:

Your articles about housing for Carmel's senior citizens focus on a very important local problem

In my opinion, the problem will not be solved by city action that would base legalization of "second kitchens" on a requirement that the owner live in the connecting building.

On two different occasions, two years apart, I was in the market for a studio or one-bedroom apartment in Carmel, where I work. I looked at 25 to 30 apartments in those searches, eventually settling into a small, one-bedroom apartment over a garage. It is light and pleasant and well located; it is also an "illegal" second kitchen without a kitchen. I get by, for now, with a hot plate and small toaster/oven, washing my dishes in the bathroom sink.

Through my own search I know that more than half of Carmel's illegal second kitchens are attached to homes that are not owner occupied (and presumably will not be.) I talked to owners in Big Sur, Orinda, San Francisco, Pebble Beach—I talked to very few here in Carmel.

If the city requires owner residence for legalizing these units it will be able to legalize fewer than half of them, at best. And the city will be taking on a horrendous task of monitoring the still-illegal ones and enforcing the ordinance.

Does it really matter whether the main part of the property is occupied by a renter rather than the property owner? Is there going to be more noise, more traffic, anything else that really makes a difference? I suspect that the emergence of this possible criterion for legalizing second units is a throwback to wishing things could be the way they were.

Reality suggests that the city bring all such units up to code and make as many as possible available for those who need what is euphemistically called "low- to moderate-housing."

I would also like to take issue with George T.C. Smith, quoted as saying, "You'd be surprised . . . at the number of people, well-known people, on Social Security." Social Security is not welfare, it is insurance ("old age, survivors and disability insurance" in official terms). As with other forms of insurance, it is paid for by the eventual recipient and even "well-known" people are entitled to its benefits if they meet the criteria.

Those are not just seniors' problems; they affect all Carmel residents.

Solutions must be based on reality, not vague or wishful thinking.

Bankrupt Carmel?

Dear Editor:

Now that the City of Carmel has purchased the Dolores Street property, at the price of $10,000 per front foot, we have acquired: a greenbelt, public toilets, a significant building, as proposed by the advocates on the City Council, or is it the first step towards bankruptcy?

Red Cross appeal

Dear Editor:

The American Red Cross has been quite active throughout the world in many different areas, from hostages to the troubles of Israel and the Arabs, or the additional troubles brought on by nature in the form of volcanoes, floods, fires and hurricanes.

Locally, as you know, we maintain the ambulances in Big Sur, Carmel and Carmel Valley. We have been on the scene when the Carmel River has become a threat, and we help our community in many other ways.

As the American Red Cross moves into its centennial year, it is with the same ideals of humanitarian service as those originally initiated by its founder, Clara Barton.

In the volunteer world, the Red Cross derives its strength and viability from 1.3 million service volunteers, 5.5 million youths who participate in Red Cross programs in more than 29,000 schools, and from 3.8 million volunteer blood donors.

The operating budget of the Carmel chapter is quite modest, considering the services offered to the Carmel area. Each dollar donated is stretched considerably by our use of volunteers.

Still, however, we are short of our 1980 fund-raising goal, and we seek your help.

Zeppelin power

Dear Editor:

Congress is peering into the airport slush-fund pot, trying to figure out how to divvy up the booty.

There's plenty of advice from snarling and sniveling fast-dealers who would dearly like to get their hands on this federal money.

How these funds are dealt will affect the shape of things to come. Is it asking too much of our lawmakers to be more creative and far-reaching in their deliberations? Just look at the English! They're developing the first saucer-shaped zeppelins on the Isle of Man. The project is backed with solid financing, and the first hop is envisioned between London and Paris.

This new mode of transport has a lot to commend itself. When something conks out, unburnable helium-filled saucers don't slam into the ground like an exploding bomb, but sail softly downward. Such a gentle landing allows all to survive, including the handicapped, elderly and the young. Saucers fight inflation by cutting back energy waste and FAA empire-building.

Zeppelin saucers are ideal for protecting Monterey's fragile environment. They eliminate costly runways and noisy approach patterns by landing and taking off vertically. By carrying comfortably hundreds of passengers, fewer flights are needed. Speeds of over 100 mph make them especially suitable for short-haul runs.

Congress mustn't put all our chips on one card when fast-shuffling lobbyists try dealing from the bottom of the deck.

A Piccadilly alternative

By AL EISNER

I'M UPSET. I think the citizens of Carmel are being taken for a ride. The City Council, under extreme pressure from the owners of the property, voted last week to purchase the 4,000-square-foot lot on Dolores that used to be the site of the Piccadilly Nursery. The purchase price is $393,500.

As of this writing, nobody really knows what the city will do with the property. There has been some talk of building some public restrooms. Councilman Howard Brunn has privately discussed building a coffeehouse — a gathering place for artists and writers and so on.

There are two reasons why I believe the action taken last week was premature and in error. First, the voters were not given a chance to express themselves on the question. Oh, sure . . . when a measure — without a price tag — was placed on the ballot last November, the people voted 801-624 to buy the property. How would they vote, however, if they knew the price? And, if they were told what the ultimate price will be when the city has to build something on the property and maintain it?

Secondly, I oppose the purchase of the property because there are so many unmet social and recreational needs in our community that could be taken care of with only a fraction of the huge sum the city has committed to the purchase.

I BELIEVE that the timid — but clever—members of the council grabbed the opportunity to buy the land when the owners said they wouldn't allow any further delays. In their heart of hearts they really wanted to buy it. They feared — rightly — that the voters would turn it down if they were confronted with the measure . . . especially if they were presented with choices as to how else the funds could be used.

All is not lost, however. The voters can still be the final arbiters of the question. What the city has bought the city can sell. I believe the city should place the issue on the ballot this November. Several of the members of the council told this newspaper last week that they would have preferred to let the voters decide, but that they voted to buy the expensive lot because the owners would not tolerate any further delay.

Let's give them a chance to prove that they really meant what they said. If the voters decide they want to spend such a huge sum for an empty lot, then we keep it. If they decide it's too much money, or that the funds could be spent more usefully on other projects, then we find a suitable buyer — and maybe even reap a profit.

There's one catch, though. I believe the issue should be decided by a two-thirds majority, since a large sum of money is involved. If 624 people voted against the purchase last November without knowing what the price would be, I think many more will vote "no" when they know what the land is going to cost.

That means that as many as 1,000 "yes" votes would be required for passage. I think I can safely predict that 1,000 citizens will not vote in favor of such folly.

If you agree, then write to the City Council and let them know how you feel about it.

Less freedom

By LENNY LEVINE

THE CARMEL CITY Council has subverted personal freedom by adopting a curfew for youths.

Denying constitutional rights to many for the misdeeds of a few or the anticipated misdeeds of a few contradicts the American spirit.

There are enough regulations on the books in this highly-regulated community to control noise. There are rules aplenty to punish vandals and other evildoers who skulk about after dark.

Will the police be the only judge of whose identification to check for proof of age to determine if they shall be allowed to wander the streets or walk in the moonlight on the beach? Who will determine if someone younger than 18 has a "legitimate" reason to be out after 11 p.m.?

Curfews elsewhere on the Peninsula don't legitimize them here.

Similar steps were taken in totalitarian regimes throughout history. Once the door opens, it is hard to close.

Old people have been mugged on Carmel streets after dark. Should all people older than 62 be required to be safely tucked into their parlors after dark?

What is the next step?

Laiolo refuses to sign resolution on Piccadilly

By JOANNE HODGEN

"I REFUSE to put my name on it or any part of it," Mayor Barney Laiolo told the City Council Aug. 25 when asked to sign a resolution authorizing the city to receive the deed to the Piccadilly Nursery property.

Instead, Councilmen Mike Brown and Frank Lloyd authorized Mayor Pro Tempore Howard Brunn to sign the resolution.

Brunn had left earlier in the proceedings; Councilman Helen Arnold was absent.

City Attorney George Brehmer said that escrow could be opened without the resolution.

The Piccadilly site at Dolores between Ocean and Seventh was purchased by the city Aug. 21 for $393,500. Owners George Linsley and Mary Lou Linhart, with their attorney, Thomas Hawley, informed the council that the city had an Aug. 31 deadline to buy the property.

Laiolo has bitterly opposed the purchase of the 40- by 100-foot site.

In other council action:

• Brehmer presented an impartial analysis and proponent argument that the city will place on the November ballot for the Senior Citizen Low Income Housing advisory measure.

The impartial analysis states that a majority vote in favor of the measure will allow the City Council to develop or construct a low-rent housing project on lots at Dolores between Fourth and Fifth, but will not require the City Council to do so.

The argument for the measure says: "More elderly citizens with low incomes will be forced to leave the city unless the measure is approved, resulting in the loss of valuable human resources and difficult readjustment for the elderly.

"Many senior citizens live in substandard, illegal units at rents requiring more of their income than they can afford. The rents of the low-income units will be set in relationship to what the tenants can afford."

• A second advisory measure on the ballot will ask Carmel residents if smoking should be regulated in Carmel restaurants.

The council reviewed an impartial analysis of the ballot measure which states that if a "majority of voters votes for the measure, it is likely that the City Council will enact a stricter ordinance regulating smoking in restaurants . . . a stricter ordinance would be one which requires restaurant owners to set aside a section of the restaurant for non-smokers."

California schools get low marks from 'report card' by the people

By FRED W. KLINE

Capitol News Service

SACRAMENTO — SINCE THE STATE of California — meaning the taxpayers — is spending more than $8 billion for public schools, it is interesting to note what the people think of those institutions of learning.

And what they think about the schools isn't very much.

What the people know and, perhaps even more important, what they think about their schools is that they aren't getting their money's worth.

A recent Gallup Poll found that 32 percent of Californians give their public schools a "D" or "F," according to news reports.

Fifty-three percent of the Californians polled believe school is worse now than it was when they went to school; only 24 percent thought things were better now.

Another key indicator is that 60 percent believe local schools should concentrate on a few basic courses rather than a wide variety. Lack of discipline was considered the top problem by 20 percent of the Californians polled.

Other factors enter into the dissatisfaction with public schools. For instance, the Assembly Office of Research, in an 85-page study, reported that there has been an 83 percent increase in dropouts the past 10 years.

So, not only are the parents and taxpayers not happy with what is going on in the schools, the young people most affected seem to think so, too.

And even though only a third of those who quit had jobs, they dropped out anyway.

Add to that the problems of violence in the schools, especially in the inner cities, and you can see that there apparently is not a very good climate for learning in our educational facilities run with public funds.

The Gallup Poll mentioned also learned that among the most significant problems, as perceived by those surveyed, were lack of financing, poor curriculum and standards, difficulty in getting good teachers, integration and busing, and drugs.

So, obviously, there is a lot of work to be done in public education in California.

It isn't just a matter of money. After all, the taxpayers are spending billions of dollars to provide decent public education and they don't think that's what they are getting.

How the billions of dollars are spent is the critical ingredient.

We think the first ingredient is to provide an atmosphere for learning in the schools. It is very difficult for a youngster to concentrate on learning if he or she is afraid to even be on campus.

State Attorney General George Deukmejian has filed suit against Los Angeles officials in an effort to get at the school violence problem.

We don't know if he'll be successful, but unless he or someone else finds a solution to that problem, everything else may just be academic.

Some good spots for a paring knife to work on the Carmel city budget

mayor's report

MY LETTER this week will be rather brief as I have been studying the budget very seriously to try to pare down some of the "frosting on the cakes."

In my opinion there are some items which we will have to forego, as I find it difficult to justify the real need for some of these expenditures.

I believe that a $12,000 investment of city funds for a book protection service for the library should be a direct library function. Funds to cover this cost should come from library sources or grants given to the library by generous donors.

While showers at Sunset Center for performers would be a great convenience, I believe that we have survived these many years without them and I cannot honestly see an expenditure of $15,000 for this luxury at this time.

While I feel that box office renovation would be a nice thing, a $6,500 expenditure for this purpose is not necessary for Sunset Center to continue functioning.

A request for $27,000 for terrace improvments at Sunset Center is also exorbitant to me — even allowing for the $10,000 gift that has been promised for this work. I believe the city — at the maximum — should match the $10,000 gift.

I would also like to consider reducing the engineering survey at Sunset to $5,000.

With regard to the Forest Theater request for $20,000 for the installation of new benches and a new stage floor, my contention is that for the amount of use this facility ...es, this expenditure is unwarranted. I ... recommend reducing this amount to ...0, which would allow for improvements ...e stage floor.

DUE TO THE EXPERIMENTAL PROGRAM being conducted on Scenic Drive, and also the fact that previous studies have been made with regard to walkways, etc., it is my opinion that this road would be better served by the painting of parallel parking stalls from 8th to 13th avenues in order to inimize the congestion resulting from random parking that currently exists.

Also along this line, it is my thought that more ramp or stairway accesses to the beach would be more effective in protecting the plantings than a rail along the drive. Rather than allocating $5,000 to study this situation as requested, I would recommend allocating $4,000 toward installing additional ramp and stairway accesses to the beach.

Another Capital Improvement item was the request for the sum of $5,000 for emergency lighting at the police station. I have been conducting a personal survey and study of this and feel that $2,000 is ample to meet this need.

In the Planning Department, a request of $50,000 for the services of a consultant to work on the General Plan, in my estimation, is excessive. I agree we need outside help to some degree, but I personally would not authorize more than $25,000 for this venture. In this regard, we have local residents who have planning experience and are willing and waiting to serve the city at no cost in preparing the General Plan.

One final item: we should allocate $7,500 rather than $10,000 for a compressor and related parts for use in the Street Department.

The total amount of these changes is $92,000, which I have recommended to the Council for approval. Hopefully, they will have agreed with my thinking. However, each councilperson has one vote and is entitled to make recommendations also.

These are the areas where I felt reductions in the budget were warranted and would reflect my sense of accountability to the taxpayers of Carmel-by-the-Sea.

The sun is shining on my smile,

Mayor Barney

Dear Editor:

I am extremely disappointed to see in print a letter from Dr. Stachowiak without any attempt to contact me. I would have gladly shared some information which would help the community understand those charges made by Dr. Stachowiak and our relationship with him.

Since my appointment by the Superior Court in March of this year, I have had a lengthy personal conference with Dr. Stachowiak. Since then I have written him twice, the latest being a point-by-point response to his "charges." This is a process which can impede the very professional operation which Dr. Stachowiak calls for. In addition Dr. Stachowiak has not had personal contact to even validate the content of his charges.

I have every confidence in the willingness, ability and professionalism of our field services and institutional staff. The defects mentioned by Dr. Stachowiak either didn't exist or have been improved; and the Probation Department is a credit to Monterey County.

Brunn, Laiolo in heated exchange

$3.8 million budget OK'd; Piccadilly purchase included

By JOANNE HODGEN

AFTER A HEATED EXCHANGE between Mayor Barney Laiolo and Councilman Howard Brunn, the Carmel City Council adopted a final budget of $3,845,100 for fiscal 1980-81 at its meeting Tuesday, Sept. 2.

The council approved the budget 4-1, Laiolo dissenting.

THE PRELIMINARY BUDGET of $3,631,180 was increased after the council approved the acquisition of the Piccadilly Nursery property for $393,500 and the addition of police patrol and parking enforcement officers for $36,770 during special budget sessions in August.

After tagging more than $500,000 to the budget, the council cut the $416,780 downtown parking fund by $220,000.

LAIOLO became embroiled in a heated debate with Brunn when Laiolo suggested an additional $77,000 be cute from the budget.

Some items, Laiolo said, were more than what are needed, particularly for cultural needs.

Major cuts proposed by the mayor included a $12,000 library security system which he said should be paid for from library funds, a Sunset Center engineering survey reduced from $10,000 to $5,000, box office renovation at Sunset of $6,500 cut completely and reduction of the Sunset terrace expenditure from $17,000 to $10,000 to match a private donation.

In addition, he recommended that $50,000 appropriated for General Plan consultant fees be halved.

BRUNN OBJECTED to Laiolo's suggestions on the eve of budget adoption.

"It was my understanding there were only a couple of insignificant items left open," Brunn said.

Laiolo explained that it was his understanding that the budget was being tentatively approved during budget sessions in August. "I think we should reduce the budget to whatever is a practical point," Laiolo said.

Brunn retorted that staff input was needed if any more major changes were to be made in the city budget.

COUNCILMAN MIKE BROWN stated: "I think it's changing at midstream tonight to just pull those items out." He said that expenditures in question could be re-evaluated at mini-budget sessions in early 1981.

"Tonight is an 11th-hour time to do it. You can't possibly look at all of these on a one-shot or a two-shot basis," Brown said.

CITY ADMINISTRATOR Doug Peterson advised council members of options open to them.

He said the items could be appropriated with the suggestion that city staff put them on hold until further consideration, or reduce them and bring the items back later.

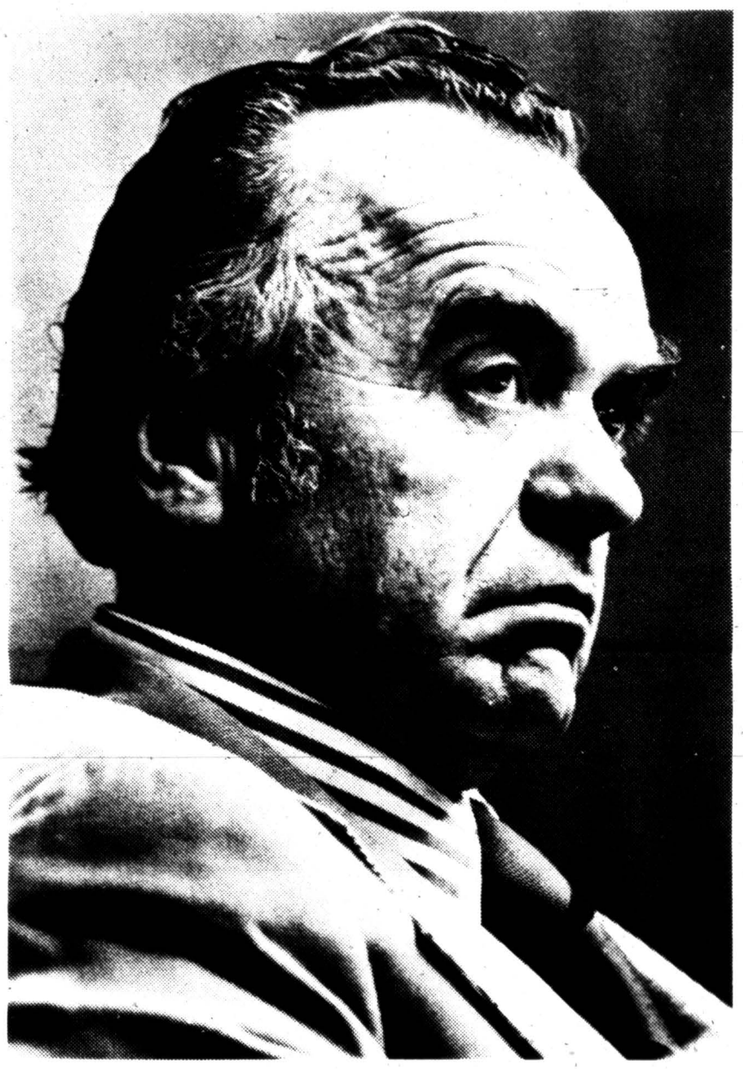
Brunn's statements that last-minute cuts were fiscally irresponsible drew a slammed gavel from the mayor, who told him to 'just wait a minute.'

Brunn told the mayor, "We don't have the time tonight to study these items. I'm a little bit appalled that you would throw these at us."

Laiolo retorted, "I don't like to see a budget go through with all these numbers. Sometimes when the egg is there someone is going to eat it."

"The frosting on the cake is what I have taken out. We've just gone budget crazy around here."

Brunn's statements that last-minute cuts were fiscally irresponsible drew a slammed gavel from the mayor, who told him to "just wait a minute."



Councilman Howard Brunn got the gavel from the mayor.

Mayor Barney Laiolo voted against the budget.

Laiolo said that it was his understanding during the earlier budget sessions that further cuts would be considered at the meeting.

"As far as I'm concerned, it's $77,000 of city money that can be spent in other ways," Laiolo insisted.

COUNCILWOMAN HELEN ARNOLD said she did not think appropriations that appeared high would necessarily be spent.

"If we can discover it can be done for less money, then I'm sure Mr. Peterson is not going to spend to the limit just because it has been appropriated," she said.

BECAUSE THE FOREST THEATER was staunchly supported in the past, Brunn insisted that the council stand beside the cultural activities of the city.

"I don't think it should be reduced by one penny," he said.

GRANTS TO SERVICE GROUPS totalling $16,000 were apportioned by the council.

Requests were made by 16 service organizations this year for $129,793, including an $80,000 request from the Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce. That request was later reduced to $2,000.

Each council member drew up a list appropriating funds that he or she believed the group was entitled to. It was later averaged by Peterson.

Planned Parenthood earned the highest grant, $3,475, with the Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce scoring zero.

Other grants include $2,970 to Meals on Wheels, $1,640 to the Carmel Business Association and $1,050 to the Rape Center. The Student Employment Service will receive $100 and the Carmel Barracudas swim team $725.

Mrs. Arnold, Lloyd and Brunn allocated amounts higher than the $16,000 total suggested, according to a "social service grants worksheet" prepared by Peterson. Brown also initially suggested a higher figure, according to Peterson, but revised it to $16,000.

Peterson said that for the council to view a balanced worksheet, the amounts proposed were prorated to reach a $16,000 total.

Cultural grants will be reviewed by the Carmel Cultural Commission at its meeting 7:30 p.m. Sept. 15 in Sunset Center.

Grants this year to cultural and service organizations total $48,000. That is $4,170 less than last year.

Peterson said earlier that the reduced figure was misleading.

"The amount of funds the Cultural Commission grants has increased by 11 percent," he said. Last year—for special organizations—he said there was a one-time grant to a stroke rehabilitation center of $4,500.

The commission will submit a grant recommendation to the City Council at its meeting Oct. 6.

REDUCTIONS made in the budget since it was introduced in early August include $2,000 in professional services in the Building Department, $2,000 in rent for the Piccadilly Nursery site which has been purchased by the city and $220,000 appropriated for downtown parking improvements, with $416,780 originally appropriated.

Councilmen Brown, Brunn and Lloyd had voted earlier to buy the site, with Laiolo opposed and Mrs. Arnold absent. The city wants the property for a use to be determined later.

BRUNN MOVED that the budget be approved subject to restudying the need for ticket windows at Sunset Center.

That was blocked by Brown, who said he would second the motion if the ticket window condition were removed.

Brunn then said, "I move we approve the budget—period."

Erasing that chalk you find on your tire could be a $50 mistake

ANYONE CAUGHT erasing parking enforcement chalk marks on his tire may chalk up a $50 fine because of an ordinance adopted by the Carmel City Council at its meeting Tuesday, Sept. 2.

Rolling a car forward to obliterate a chalk mark and rubbing the mark out with wet sponges or itchy fingers are all crimes now.

However, a driver can gamble. If the parking space is still empty after a loop around the block, it is legal to slip back into the slot.

The wording of a similar parking ordinance was ruled inappropriate by the state in October 1979 because only police officers had the authority to cite violators.

The ordinance now states: "The removal, obliteration or concealment of any chalk mark or other distinguishing mark used by any police officer or other employee or officer of this city . . . if done for the purpose of evading a parking regulation . . . shall be unlawful and shall constitute an infraction."

A city employee must witness the act before a citation is issued.

Carmel Police Chief William Ellis said that a fine of $25 would be appropriate.

HOWEVER, CITY ATTORNEY George Brehmer said that the bail scale is $50 in Monterey, adding that the court prefers to keep fines the same from city to city.

Though he recommended a $25 fine, Ellis quipped he would not be "displeased with a $50 fine as long as it was not against me."

Ellis said that 25 citations were issued in 1979 before the ordinance was deleted. A fine was then $25.

Hearing is scheduled for accused slayer, 17

THE ACCUSED SLAYER of Cecil Vernon Clark Jr., whose body was discovered on Carmel Beach July 16, will appear at a pre-trial hearing Sept. 18 in juvenile court.

Monterey County Superior Court Judge E.J. Leach ruled Tuesday (Sept. 2) that the 17-year-old would not be certified for trial in an adult court. His name, therefore, will not be released.

Assistant District Attorney Dean Flippo said the youth was charged with murder.

The bludgeoned body of Clark, 45, was discovered under the sand near the foot of 13th Street.

The boy was arrested by U.S. Border Patrol officers in Tecate near the Mexican border the next day as a suspect in the slaying.

He is from the San Diego area.

Curfew enacted for Carmel youth younger than 18

By JOANNE HODGEN

WITH LITTLE DISCUSSION, the Carmel City Council has passed a curfew law that prohibits loitering and wandering by persons younger than 18 in any public place after 11 p.m.

The measure was approved at the council meeting Tuesday, Sept. 2. The vote was unanimous.

The curfew ordinance is in line with other ordinances recently adopted by Peninsula cities and Monterey County.

A county curfew ordinance was established to discourage loitering and crimes associated with it in several trouble spots where youths congregate at night, according to Monterey County Sheriff D.B. "Bud" Cook.

ELIZABETH STIMSON of Scenic Road told the council a poll of her neighbors indicated that they would support the curfew law.

"I think this would give the police teeth," she said.

Scenic Road has been considered a problem area by residents and police because of noisy youths congregating there. Complaints of vandalism, traffic congestion and drinking were aired by residents in the area in August.

Councilman Mike Brown said he understood that most problems occurred during the early evening hours. However, Mrs. Stimson said that problems continue until late into the night.

Police Chief William Ellis said before the meeting that problems have decreased along Scenic Road as the opening of school nears, though many youths are congregating in other areas outside of Carmel.

Earlier, Ellis said the curfew would not be used as a hammer, but to discourage illegal activities in Carmel.

Police will have the option of asking youths to disperse from an area or cite them for an infraction (less than a misdemeanor with no incarceration). The youth could be detained until released to the custody of his parents.

Once a youth is cited, juvenile authorities would consider further action.

Parents can also be cited for not controlling the youth.

The curfew will be in effect in 30 days.

Only you can prevent forest fires.

Rules to tighten short-term rentals are backed

By JOANNE HODGEN

NEW REGULATIONS TO CONTROL short-term rentals of single-family homes were given a nod of approval by the Carmel City Council during a joint meeting of the council and Carmel Planning Commission Wednesday, Aug. 27.

The council also told the commission to develop a plan that would clamp controls on the number of like businesses within the city limits. The size of single-family homes in the residential district would also be studied once again.

The meeting was called to iron out differences caused by poor communication between the panels on the three issues.

An ordinance prepared by the commission's Land Use Committee to regulate transient rentals was endorsed by the council. Only the registration procedures to be followed by owners and their agents will be revised.

A transient rental ordinance currently in the City Code prohibits short-term rentals in the residential district for less than 30 days.

IN 1978, IT WAS brought to the attention of the City Council that many homes were used on a transient basis. Legislation rejected by the council in January 1979 would have clarified the ordinance and upheld the 30-day minimum occupancy requirement for single-family dwellings.

In July 1979, the ordinance was again revised by the Planning Commission to allow short-term rentals for a limited period of time.

The council again addressed the issue in May when it agreed that the law would be unenforceable.

Commissioner Donald Davidson told the council it was not the intent of the ordinance to ferret out transient rentals on a house-to-house basis. The ordinance was to provide a mechanism, he said, to pinpoint transient rentals which were creating problems in neighborhoods.

According to Davidson, other objectives were to increase the availability of permanent housing in the area, thus lowering rents. "Transient rentals escalate the cost of permanent homes," he said.

Commissioner John Logan said that when the ordinance was sent back to the Planning Commission in 1979 two points were rewritten that would make enforcement more feasible.

The Land Use Committee, he said, included the word "advertise" in a regulation that prohibits homeowners or their agents to "arrange, negotiate or otherwise act to create a transient occupancy."

Registration proceedings were also defined in the latest version of the ordinance, Logan said.

Violation of the ordinance would be a misdemeanor.

CITY ADMINISTRATOR Doug Peterson advised the council that "to make advertising illegal simplifies the city's burden of proof."

Councilman Frank Lloyd expressed doubt that the ordinance could remedy the problems created by transient rentals.

Planning Commission Chairman Robert Stephenson remarked: "If we don't enact this law it will be tacit approval for aggressive motel owners to start buying up property as annexes to their regular establishment. It will be giving the notice that nothing will happen."

The council suggested that the Planning Commission change the requirements homeowners must follow to register their homes for short-term occupancy by transients.

The ordinance, as worded now, requires the permanent occupant or his agent to register the home with the city clerk. The registration will define the time each home will be rented. No fee is required.

Peterson said the purpose of the registration procedure would be to simplify prosecution.

"If registration hadn't occurred it would make occupancy on its face illegal," he said.

Logan suggested that registration be reviewed at a Planning Commission meeting in September. It will be placed on the City Council agenda at a later date.

'Transient rentals escalate the cost of permanent homes.'

THE COUNCIL AND PLANNING COMMISSION agreed that the loss of locally oriented businesses was affecting the character of the village, during a discussion of a proposal that requires a minimum distance between like businesses.

The plan to restrict the number of restaurants, gift shops and art galleries was first introduced by former Mayor Gunnar Norberg.

Stephenson told the council that the commission concluded that to establish a distance between like uses was not an effective approach.

"To set an arbitrary distance between like uses, you would have a certain number of hardware stores in town as long as they were so far apart."

He suggested that the numbers and types of businesses be regulated.

"My thought was to determine how many hardware stores the city could support," Stephenson said.

Mayor Barney Laiolo said that it would be difficult to determine the number of businesses Carmel needs.

High rents have driven locally oriented business away, he said, adding "I don't know if there's a way of controlling things."

Davidson asked, "Are we going to sit back and comment on it as if it is an unsolvable problem?"

Commissioner Sandy Swain warned: "I know we're sliding down a very deep path, and I think we're doing it very fast."

"It seems to me the time to do something about it is now."

Laiolo observed: "If they (businesses) make it they make it. If they don't they go broke."

The council advised the Planning Commission to begin a study of the issue.

LARGE HOUSES became a contoversial topic two years ago when the council passed an ordinance limiting lot coverage. They were again the focus of the council's and Planning Commission's attention.

Design review of single-family homes was discussed, a solution that had been rejected by the council in the past.

Logan said, "If you are really after (trying to discourage) large visual masses, the only way is through design review."

He suggested, "Any building in the residential district taller than 18 feet from the highest point of the building, discounting chimneys and vent, above the lowest point of either the existing or natural grade would automatically go to design review."

Accoridng to Logan, that would effectively eliminate design review for 90 percent of the homes.

Councilmen Lloyd, Arnold and Brown encouraged the Planning Commission to proceed with develop of a plan that would regulate the construction of large homes. They agreed that the loss of small cottages was destroying Carmel's character.

Laiolo, however, objected to still another form of regulation in the village.

"I don't see any reason to discuss it at this point. We have limits on the books now," he said.

"I'm still not one who believes in the infringement of city laws on personal property rights," Laiolo said, adding: "It's absolutely wrong."

positive note.

The slash in property tax revenue since Proposition 13 had forced the district into a tailspin, with major cuts in teaching staff throughout its seven schools, loss of interscholastic sports at Carmel Middle School, reduction to a five-period day from six periods at Middle School and near decimation of the creative arts courses, including music and foreign language.

This year, principals, central office administrative staff, parents and the school board have worked to reconstruct programs with measurable success.

An optional six-period day was restored at Middle School, German was reinstated and the instrumental and general music courses were given a staffing boost.

Middle School also was granted increased library staffing, while the High School's counseling staff was augmented from 2½ to three full-time positions.

A UNIFORM STUDENT BEHAVIOR code has been adopted and will be implemented in all schools in response to vandalism, smoking on campus and other forbidden activities.

The reconstruction has come at a cost, however, to teachers, students and administrators.

BUS FEES were imposed for the first time this year, $50 per student per year to generate $47,000 for the transportation budget, and a $30 athletic fee was retained from last year.

A reorganization of the central office administrative staff resulted in elimination of the assistant superintendent position.

And teachers may have to settle for increased class loads and a pay raise for 1980-81 that will be only half the current inflation rate. The school board has considered an increase in the student-teacher ratio from 27-1 to 28-1, and has offered a 6.5 percent raise, although both items are subject to negotiations between the district and teachers.

'Without the creative arts, we find there's more writing on the walls and desks, he said.'

The school board is also considering selling two unused school sites to generate additional revenue, mainly for refurbishing the high school.

SUPERINTENDENT William Rand, hired in June, was in the throes of preparing for the first day of school last week.

Last-minute tasks included sending out information packets to every parent, completing negotiations with teachers and finalizing the district's 1980-81 budget.

"The budget is a tight one," he remarked, "but it's adequate to provide a sound educational experience for all of our students."

The school board was scheduled to adopt a $6.4 million budget Sept. 2, an increase of two percent from 1979-80.

Rand said the district is caught in a double bind, in that it is considered a "high-wealth" district so that it receives a lower scale apportionment of state funds for programs, while parents continue to hold high expectations for what the district should offer students.

While the district will have restored some of its creative arts programs for this year, Rand said the emphasis will remain primarily on providing quality education in the basics.

"We've always stressed the basics," he said. "Our national norm tests show students doing above average in math, reading and writing."

THE DISTRICT will retain its split-reading program in the elementary schools, he noted.

Pupils in grades 1 to 5 come to school at staggered times, so that in the morning and afternoon, teachers have half the pupils at a time to give special attention to basic reading skills.

THE OPTIONAL six-period day was restored at Middle School, with the additional period at the end of the day so it would not conflict with early morning music courses.

The music program in the district begins in elementary school with instrumental and general music classes, continuing through to high school where students can perform in the band and choir.

While beginning German courses had been cut from the Middle School last year, restoration of the six-period day allowed offerings this year in German, French and Spanish.

Rand noted, "We're trying to put back some of the courses eliminated, but we're not able to offer all that we did before Proposition 13."

A student behavior committee submitted its report this year and a code of conduct was adopted by the school board for all grades, Rand noted. The code, which will be included in the packet sent to parents, lists behavior that is not appropriate and the consequences of violations.

While Rand brushed aside a question on whether student misbehavior has increased, he insisted "student discipline can be maintained if rules are established and consistently enforced."

Rand said the administration hopes to have teacher contract negotiations completed in the final week before the start of school.

The teachers have asked for a 15 percent raise. The district has offered 6.5 percent plus benefits. A similar impasse last year nearly forced a strike, which was averted at the last minute by a compromise settlement.

Rand said of this year's bargaining: "We hope to meet the needs of teachers and be compatible with the tight budget."

Funding remains the "greatest uncertainty for the district," Rand said. "The biggest comfort is knowing we have a very competent staff."

NICK NICHOLSON, principal of Carmel Middle School, said plans for the new school year include an expanded student store and athletic program.

For the first time, the campus store will be offering gym shorts and T-shirts in the school colors, blue and gold, he said. The new school mascot, a cougar, will be emphasized on book covers.

"We're really trying to push school spirit more this year," Nicholson said.

INTRAMURAL SPORTS will include boys' volleyball, girls' volleyball, girls' soccer and boys' track.

The intramural program is scheduled during the lunch period. "It helps with discipline," Nicholson said. "We don't have to spend as much energy watching the kids."

AFTER-SCHOOL ATHLETICS, severely curtailed in the past two years, is being rebuilt with the assistance of the YMCA.

Sports will include coed soccer, coed basketball, and track, culminating with a big meet in the spring. Nicholson said the YMCA provides personnel and the school provides the facilities.

"Maybe we'll put together an interscholastic program, with basketbal soccer, flag football or volleyball teams to play other scho ls," Nicholson said.

The inte scholastic program would depend on collecting athletic fees, finding coaches who could volunteer time and setting up the schedule with other schools, he noted.

Before Proposition 13, the interscholastic program included track, football, tennis and basketball.

A main obstacle to it this year is the optional six-period day. Nicholson noted that 375 out of 600 students requested six periods, so that about half the students leave school at 2 p.m. and half at 3, making it difficult to coordinate after-school

A highly successful magazine subscription campaign initiated last year will be launched again. Nicholson noted that the campaign, which is sponsored by the Parents Club and Reader's Digest, netted $19,000 in magazine subscriptions last year, providing the Parents Club with $7,500.

The campaign will be kicked off this year with an assembly Oct. 9, Nicholson said.

"The students are encouraged to go to their neighbors and relatives. If every kid sells one subscription, we'll be in Fat City."

Money raised through the campaign is funneled back into the school by the Parents Club. Last year's revenue went to buy a new drum set for the music department ($500), mats for physical education ($600), language arts supplies ($500), art supplies ($200), intramural coaching staff ($500) and part-time instrumental instruction ($500).

Nicholson noted that Reader's Digest had predicted the school might succeed its first year selling $7,500 in subscriptions, but that figure was exceeded on the first day of the campaign.

"THE GOAL of the district this year is to look at the positive after the last two years, high school principal Dan Stevenson said.

"We really felt the pinch in art, music, photography; everything but drama suffered in the aftermath of Proposition 13," he said.

He acknowledged that for many students, the creative arts courses are important outlets, positive ways of releasing tension.

"Without the creative arts, we find there's more writing on the walls and desks," he said.

An effort is under way to engage artists from the community to serve in residence at the high school.

"Now that Proposition 13 cut property taxes," Stevenson said, "it would be nice if people donated 10 percent of their time or talent to the schools. There's a great bank of community talent that we could use."

The juggling of courses and staff is a major part of Stevenson's job, a part that he said grows less tasteful as the decisions become harder. He said he had to notify three of four temporary teachers this year that they could not be rehired. Because of funding uncertainties, Stevenson had to wait until just before the start of school to notify them.

"It gets to be a real frustrating game anymore," he said. "I thank my lucky stars for quality staff, a good student body and the support from parents.

"If it weren't for those three ingredients I wouldn't have been here seven years."

Stevenson School opens with 468 students

Robert Louis Stevenson School in Pebble Beach opened for the 29th year Sept. 2 when the 168 resident boys arrive on campus.

This year, in addition to students from California and 10 other states, there will be students from France, Germany, Spain, Italy, Egypt, Jordan, Saudi-Arabia, Iran, India, Thailand, Hong Kong, Taiwan, Japan, Korea, Canada, Mexico, Gautemala and Venezuela. There are also 300 day boy and girl students from Pebble Beach, Carmel, Pacific Grove, Monterey and surrounding communities in grades 9 through 12. Faculty and administrative staff will be 61 for the 1980-81 school year.

New faculty appointments include Mrs. Gillian M. Challenger, University of Newcastle-upon-Tyre, Great Britain, B.A., San Jose State University, M.A., Mathematics; Mrs. Janet M. Knotts, Stanislaus State College, B.A., girl's athletics; Nichole N. Longfellow, University of Paris, B.A., French; Mary S. Pendlay, University of California, Santa Cruz, B.A., Stanford University, M.A., English; and David Salcido, Monterey Institute of International Studies, B.A., Spanish.

Terry Wood, California State University, Chico, B.A., will be a part-time instructor in art; and Thomas T. Brown, Oregon State University, B.S., will be a member of the athletic staff.

Two teaching interns join the faculty — Mark M. Homnack, Williams College, B.A., German, and Jeffrey C. Knotts, California Polytechnic State University, B.A., economics.

John P. Keyes, a teacher at the Noble and Greenough School in Dedham, Mass., is the 1980-81 exchange teacher in history. He has an A.B. degree from Harvard College and a M.A. from Wesleyan University.

Scholarships are available

High school seniors from across the United States can compete this fall in the Century III Leaders program for more than 200 college scholarships ranging from $500 to $10,000 — more than $200,000 in all.

Interested students must apply by Oct. 15. Applications are available through local school principals' offices.

Sponsored by the National Association of Secondary

School Principals, which represents more than 35,000 high school principals, the Century III Leaders program seeks to stimulate creative thinking among those young people who will be solving the problems of tomorrow.

In the selection of school winners, students are initially judged on their leadership abilities, community involvement and awareness of current events.

Nuclear waste report sought

Capitol News Service

State Sen. Barry Keene has filed a United States Freedom of Information Act request with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency for release of a report on the level of radiation leaking from nuclear waste dumped off the California coast.

"It's an outrage that the Environmental Protection Agency would sit on this report for so long," said Keene, D-Mendocino.

Keene also said that he is concerned about the fact that not one federal agency seems capable of telling him what kind of nuclear waste was dumped or where in the Pacific Ocean it was dumped.

Old dance craze hits Carmel: the back-to-school-jitters bug

By STEVE HELLMAN

THE STUDENT'S first day back in school can be filled with enough anxiety and excitement to make the skin creep.

One 14-year-old freshman starting at Carmel High School said the first day means fear, mainly the fright of being at the bottom of the social totem pole and a target of pushy older kids.

For a senior, the first day is the beginning of childhood's end, the start of the final year toward the graduation podium and all the scary options and welcome responsibilities of leaving home, entering college or stepping into the adult work world.

Not the least bit nervous is a student coming to Carmel Middle School, new in town and entering the sixth grade, but anxious to take on the responsibility of sitting in more than one classroom and learning from more than one teacher each day.

Students contemplating the first day of school last week were either fearful or thrilled, but they agreed on one thing — Sept. 8 will herald a return to studies, noisy hallways, flirtations and new beginnings that come with each new school year.

"I'M NOT NERVOUS," Jennifer Wayman ventured.

The 10-year-old sixth-grader had some reasons to be, though. Having moved here from Colorado, she was new to Carmel Middle School, did not have a lot of friends yet and was not certain what it would be like at school in Carmel Valley.

All the same, she said, "I'm just happy to be out of elementary school. I'm glad they let sixth-graders into junior high school here."

An avid reader, especially of mysteries, Jennifer said she enjoys going to school and looks forward to taking math, typing, German and more.

"I want to take as many classes as I can," she said.

Like the majority of her schoolmates, she has elected to take six periods.

FRANK DICE and Danny Gibbons are entering seventh grade this year. Both 12-year-olds are just glad to be out of the sixth grade.

"Sixth grade was an experience, let me tell you," Frank said. "You really had to get psyched up for it, coming out of fifth grade at the top of the ladder and going back in at the bottom."

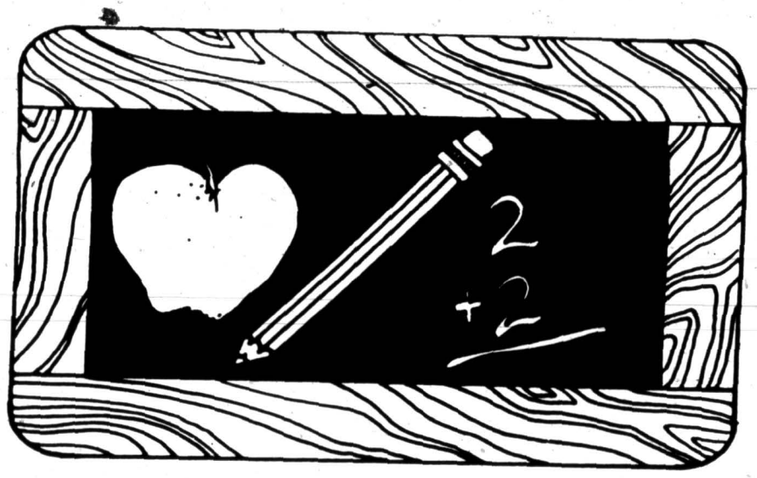
This year was definitely going to be a relief from last year, Frank said, because he is more reassured, more certain of what is going to happen.

Danny said he is looking forward to having his favorite math teacher and taking the crafts class in plastics, wood and ceramics.

"I like getting to pick two electives," Danny said. He and Frank both selected six periods this year.

They both said they look forward to the school dances, scheduled about five times each year.

Asked if he has a career in mind, Frank said he wanted to become a sports commentator, a writer or publicity man; his father is a lawyer. Danny suggested that he would follow in his father's footsteps and become an accountant.



"I want to get a business degree and make a lot of money," he said.

Was Middle School a rough place?

Frank said the school has few fights, with maybe two fights a year that attract the whole school.

"I've had only two fights," Frank said, "and I sprained my thumb in one. It sprained my mind also, so I'm not into fighting."

"It's easier to talk fast or run," Danny said.

"It'll be tougher going into high school," Frank added.

"THANK GOD it's my last year," Terri Blunt said.

The 12-year-old eighth grader said she looked forward to her final year at Carmel Middle School. She is taking six classes, including one period as an office aide and another in crafts.

She said she's angry about having to pay $50 to ride the school bus from her home in Carmel Valley Village to school. Her mother is proprietor of a bar in the Village, and her father is a stained-glass craftsman.

Asked what she planned to do with her studies, she said, "I want to marry a doctor or be a bartender."

She added: "I get scared thinking about going to high school next year, but it's nothing I can't handle."

"I'M SCARED, I'm nervous, I'm kinda hesitant," Kristen Ellena said.

Honest words from the 14-year-old who is entering the ninth grade at Carmel High School.

The trials of being a freshman, however, will be made somewhat easier because her father is a teacher at the high school.

"I already know most of the teachers, and I'm familiar with the school," she said.

Comparing it to Middle School, she said: "It's more like the real world. It's super fun. It won't be that hard."

She plans to take volleyball or girls' football, and she'll be enrolling in an English I honors class.

"I'm kind of hesitant about going into honors English," she confided, but added confidently: "It's a lot of writing. I'll have to get used to it."

ENTERING CARMEL High School as a freshman also makes Kim Allred, 14, a bit nervous.

Alan McEwen photos

Jennifer Wayman: not nervous

"I've heard that freshmen get pushed around," she said. "The school's bigger, the kids are bigger."

All the same, Kim said, "It's exciting to go to high school." Her father is fire chief in Carmel.

"I'M LOOKING forward to it," Nikki Tostevin said.

This will be her last year at the high school, and the 17-year-old senior is already thinking a lot about going to college.

She is director of the school pep band, plays trumpet and this year will serve as the student body representative to the school board. She is also a member of the school site council.

"I try to be active, it makes school more fun, it brings you closer to life," said Nikki, whose father is an accountant.

While she has most of her required courses behind her and will take more interesting and challenging academic classes this year, she lamented the fact that freshmen are loaded down so much with required courses.

"We're trying to build up the band, but freshmen have to take so many required classes, it's hard for them to get into band," she said.

'I get scared thinking about going to high school next year, but it's nothing I can't handle.'

Nikki insisted that there should be greater opportunity for all students to take more electives.

College is foremost on her mind. "I'm really looking forward to it. I want to go right into college," she said.

"Besides, getting away from home is half the fun."

New students need shots

IF YOU HAVE a child who will enter kindergarten this fall, make sure you have an up-to-date immunization record, Robert J. Bowersox, M.D., director of health for Monterey County, advises parents.

Ninety-six percent of the students in Monterey County schools are now adequately immunized, he said.

To maintain that high level, he said the "no shots, no school" policy will be strictly enforced for all new students. Parents will need proof of immunization at registration. Parents will also need their child's birth certificate.

Immunizations required are at least four DTP shots

(diphtheria, tetanus and whooping cough), three oral polio immunizations; (the last DTP and polio must have been given after age 2), and immunizations against measles, mumps and rubella. "These immunizations are the parents' responsibility," Dr. Bowersox said.

Teachers negotiate to the wire; strike is called last-ditch effort

By JOANNE HODGEN

CONTRACT NEGOTIATIONS between the Carmel Unified School District and the Association of Carmel Teachers (ACT) continue as the opening day of school, Monday, Sept. 8, draws near.

Teachers have asked for a salary increase of 15 percent. The school district has offered 6.5 percent, including salary and benefits.

The negotiating stance struck by teachers and the school district is similar to the one taken last year when a strike by teachers was averted only hours before the start of the new school year.

ACT requested 9 percent last year while the district offered 4.1 percent. School district and ACT negotiators reached an agreement for a 5 percent raise. That would have included an additional 2 percent at the end of the 1979-80 school year if enrollment and budget reserves remained at the expected levels. However, reserves, which were at $212,000, declined and enrollment dropped.

A STATEMENT prepared by ACT was presented to the Carmel school district board of trustees at its meeting Tuesday, Sept. 2.

It said: "The Carmel School District has offered the Carmel teachers a salary increase of 6.5 percent, when the cost of living index for Northern California as of June 1980 was 15.4 percent. The Association of Carmel Teachers is appalled that the district would offer an amount so low and attach a number of contingencies to the offer."

Bob Zampatti, business manager for the school district, said salary demands made by the teachers have been lowered from 15 percent to 12 percent, adding that he was uncertain whether the lower figure included benefits.

"We're still too far apart to get down to those specifics," he said.

IMOGENE SPEISER, head negotiator for ACT, said teachers want to maintain the pupil-teacher ratio at 27-1, its current level.

ACT has also requested a preparation period for elementary school teachers during the school day and conference time to allow teachers to meet with parents to discuss their child's proficiency test scores.

A retirement proposal is also being negotiated to provide incentives to teachers at the top salary scale to retire.

Teachers' salaries are $11,947 to $24,137 a school year.

The Carmel school district has been hit hard by the passage of Proposition 13 that reduced property taxes, and the Serrano-Priest decision which allocates state bailout funds according to the financial status of each district.

Carmel is considered a wealthy district. Last year Carmel received a 3.2 percent increase, while the average bailout for school districts was 8.8 percent.

Declining enrollment also contributed to the downturn in revenue, with regular and special education students dropping from 2,662 in 1979-80 to 2,513 projected for 1980-81.

Zampatti said the state has guaranteed the school district 2 percent more in revenue than last year, raising state and local funding from $5.3 million to $5.4 million.

The district will also be given $9 per pupil based on an average daily attendance. He projects that will add only $24,300 to overall revenues.

According to Zampatti, local property taxes contribute about $2.6 million toward total revenues.

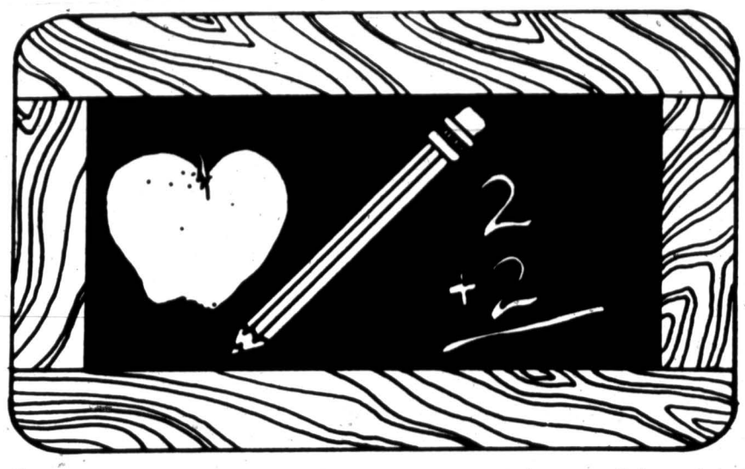
HENRY AVILA, president of ACT, said, "In all fairness there should be some way of giving teachers a fair salary increase."



He noted that if the teachers accepted a 6.5 percent raise it would mean a loss in buying power during the past two years of 20 percent.

Other local school districts, he observed, have made adjustments to compensate teachers, pointing to Carmel district's ending balance of $200,000 which could be contributed towards salaries.

Avila said morale has been low among teachers since the passage of Proposition 13. "I've been in the district for 15 years and seen quite a bit of change recently because of the problems," he said.

BOTH SIDES agreed that a general strike is probable only in a last-ditch effort to resolve differences.

According to Zampatti, no deadline has been set to conclude negotiations. "We're not anticipating a strike nor are we saying there will be no strike. That subject has not been broached by either side," he said.

'We're not anticipating a strike nor are we saying there will be no strike.'

"Nine times out of 10 school districts aren't aware of it in advance," Zampatti stated.

However, Avila noted that last year the teachers' association voted not to open school on the first day unless a decision was reached.

A negotiating session was scheduled yesterday morning (after press time) between the district and ACT. After that session, teachers and negotiators were to report what terms had been reached.

Avila said the meeting on Wednesday is necessary because the first workday for most teachers is on Thursday (today). At that time, Avila said, "we're really at the end. This would be the final negotiating meeting, so to speak, because they've gone around and around to come to some sort of agreement."

There are options open to the teachers, Avila said.

If the district's proposal is rejected and an impasse declared, ACT could call on the California Teachers Association to provide a mediator, Avila explained.

"We could go with that, or the extreme case would be to go on strike," he said.

Because Carmel is a rich school district, Avila said, it has been a difficult transition.

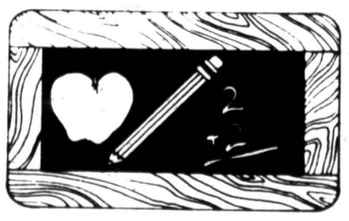
"You can see that the teachers are quite disgruntled because they're caught in the middle," Avila observed.

Academies' vacancies noted

U.S. Rep. Leon E. Panetta has issued a reminder to men and women aged 17 to 22 that he is still accepting applications for the classes that will enter the military academies in 1981.

He will be filling vacancies at the United States Military, Air Force, Naval and Merchant Marine academies.

Applications can be obtained by contacting Panetta's local office, 380 Alvarado, Monterey, 93940, or by calling 649-3555.



Applicants are required to complete application procedures by Dec. 1.

Sending them off to college needs a lot of advance financial planning

PAYING FOR your children's college education may be getting easier after all.

Before you discount that statement as pure folly, or calculate that sending three children to college could cost $120,000, consider the changes that have been taking place.

For one thing, even though the cost of college has been increasing, the rate of increase has slowed, according to the California Society of CPAs. From 1978 to 1979 college costs increased only 6 percent, compared to a 17 percent increase in 1973.

At the same time, the amount of financial aid available increased 15 percent last year. Federal aid alone doubled between 1974 and 1978, and last year 60 percent of college students got some financial aid from government, industry, foundations or service organizations.

Twenty years ago, a family of four with a $12,000 income and one child in college had to pay $1,805 toward college costs.

Today, that family would contribute only $270. If you earn $20,000 and have three children, you would be expected to pay just over $1,000 a year toward college costs.

Some developing trends may reduce the cost of college education even more. The student population is decreasing, and many colleges are streamlining curriculums to pare expenses. There are more work-study programs available which allow students to pay their way through school. There is also increasing emphasis on living at home, and local community colleges are beefing up curriculums to handle increased enrollments.

More companies are providing financial aid for children of their employees in the form of scholarships and low-interest loans. And finally, the federal government may come up with some future tax incentives for families strapped with college tuition costs.

In addition to outright grants and scholarships based on need, there are many sources of low-interest college loans. The federal government offers loans at seven percent with no ceiling on family income.

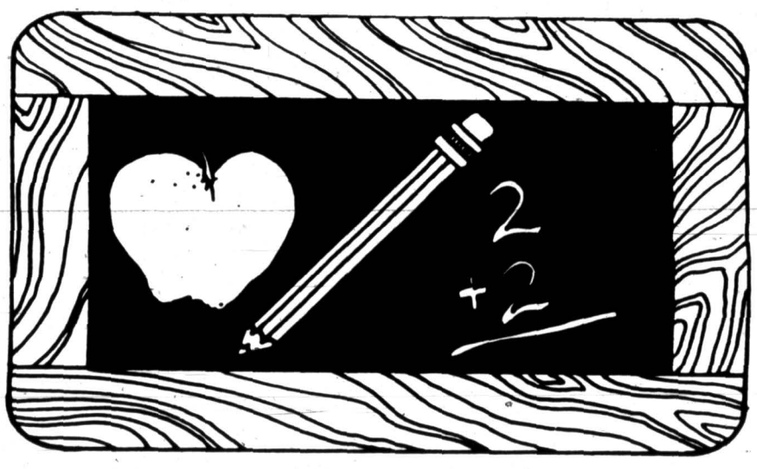
Students can borrow as much as $2,500 a year and repayment doesn't begin until after graduation. National Direct Student Loans, with an interest rate of three percent, are granted by colleges themselves. They can provide a maximum of $5,000 for the four-year period. Banks offer college loans with longer payback times, and often at lower than normal interest rates. (There has been some talk recently of raising interest rates on some of those loans.)

IT IS IMPORTANT to remember that families don't begin early enough to explore all the sources available to them.

It's wise to contact a college while the student is in the junior year of high school and find out what sources of aid they offer—and what they know about other sources. High school guidance counselors are also becoming more knowledgeable in this area.

Enlist your child in the search. Remind him his summer earnings will be considered part of his college aid. A copy of your income tax return may also be required, so it's a good idea to get your taxes done early in the year your child is applying for financial aid.

The need for financial aid is based not only on your income, but on the number of children you have, your living costs and any unusual expenses (such as medical bills or support of aged parents). So don't assume that because you make $40,000 you will have to pay the entire college bill yourself.



Although you may qualify for considerable aid, there will undoubtedly be a portion of the college expense that you and your family will provide. If you are serious about sending your children to college, you should start planning and saving when the child is born, or by the time he is in kindergarten. If you start to save $50 a month, even at a mere 5 1/4 percent when the child is 8, you will have $8,000 when he's 18.

If you wait until he's 13, you'll have to save $145 a month to reach the same goal.

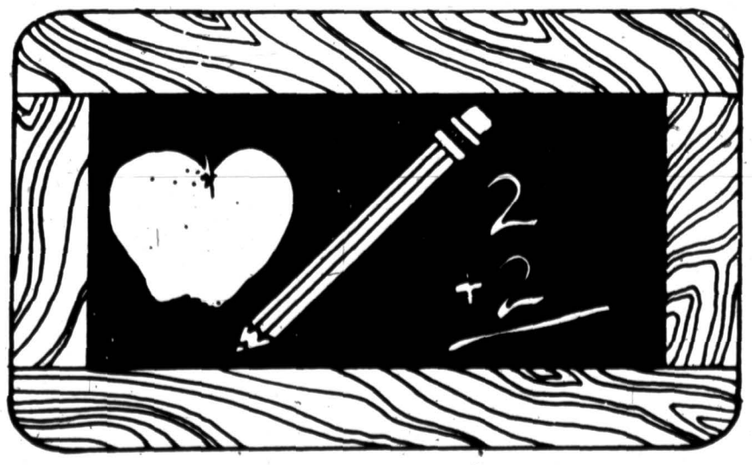
Custodian or trust accounts earn interest and provide a tax benefit to you. If such an account is opened in your child's name, he will pay the tax on any interest or dividends over $1,000 a year at a lower rate than you would. When the child reaches the age of majority, he controls the money—so you may want to consider this in your planning. Are you willing to give your child the money if he chooses not to go to college?

In the same vein, you could make an interest-free loan to your child; he could invest the money and pay tax on the earnings at his lower tax rate. Giving your child appreciating stock which he could sell to pay for college, is another idea. His tax on any capital gain would be less than yours.

Other ways to get money for college could include refinancing your mortgage, borrowing on your life insurance or pledging your savings account passbook for a loan.

And before you make up your financial plan, don't forget there is always money needed for additional food, entertainment, telephone bills and all the incidental costs students incur away from home. They can add up to $1,000 or more a year.

And then, too, your own phone bill will probably increase . . . with all those collect calls from college asking you to "send money."



Valley High is beginning second year

CARMEL VALLEY HIGH School begins its second year Sept. 8 with an increase in staff, enrollment and curriculum.

The continuation high school, on Schulte Road, will have four full-time teachers, an increase of nearly one full-time position from last year, according to Principal Jim Kohnke. He said enrollment will climb to as many as 50 students; there were 36 last year.

Kohnke said every effort is being made to establish the school as a place where students with a variety of problems can have a positive learning experience. Students at the school range from very bright children who need alternatives to regular study to those with severe learning disabilities, he said.

"There is no stereotypic continuation student," he said. "Our kids simply need a different type of experience in secondary education than they get at the regular high school."

While basic academics are required, attention is given to individualized work and creative projects, he said.

Courses include psychology, photography including a darkroom, and printshop and cooking classes.

"Once a week we have a communal meal," he said.

Sports include girls' volleyball, weight training, table tennis and track.

With an expanded photography course this year, Kohnke said, the school hopes to produce a yearbook.

"We want to make it a real school project, using our expertise in the darkroom and printing," he said.

Curriculum also includes field trips.

Kohnke noted, "You've got to get kids out in the real world if they're going to learn."

County fair winners listed

The Monterey County Fair's art department has awarded a $300 prize to Christine Montgomery of Carmel Valley for her watercolor Promised Gift.

A best-of-show award went to Winston S. Boyer of Carmel for his color print Fire Eater. He also won first place in the color print, seascape division with Mussel Fields—Britany France, and in landscape color prints with Morro Bay California.

Olaf Dahlstrand of Carmel won an award of merit for his watercolor Death Valley.

The Carmel Orchid Society received the Outstanding Design for Clubs award.

CHS grads galore

Saturday, Aug. 23, will be a day long remembered by the 275 Carmel High School alumni and spouses who gathered at Michael Appleton's ranch on Robinson Canyon Road in Carmel Valley. The reunion was for CHS graduates from 1941, the year the school opened, to 1950. Organizers of the party were Stan Ewig, Paul Artellan and Appleton. One graduate came from New Jersey for the party. And Roy Parsons, class of '44, came from Africa especially for the reunion. The group played horseshoes, swam, danced and consumed vast quantities of barbecued chicken — Carmel Valley style, of course. 'I saw people I haven't seen for 35 years,' Ewig said. 'A lot of them are people I'll probably never see again. It was an afternoon filled with love.'

CHS Padres are ready. . .

By JOANNE HODGEN

A LOT OF SPORTS are packed into Carmel High School.

Football, basketball, cross country, swimming, water polo, wrestling and tennis are only seven of 15 athletic programs that spark the interest of 500 to 600 participating students each year.

Among the teams that will see action during the fall semester are water polo, cross country, volleyball, football and girls' swimming.

JOE FELDEISEN, outgoing athletic director, said the athletic program is one of the largest on the Monterey Peninsula.

Declining enrollment, which dropped from more than 1,000 to 965 for the 1980-81 school year, has not affected the caliber of Carmel High athletes. They keep getting better.

BOB WALTHOUR, coach of the girls' swimming team, said the team hopes to stroke to its 100th victory this year. Walthour's teams have posted an impressive 90-1 record since 1971, the year he began coaching at Carmel.

Carmel stretched its winning streak in the Mission Trails Athletic League to 70 in 1979.

. . . to put some more winning seasons in the book

Walthour attributes several factors to the team's winning tradition.

"We work hard and have had continuity in the program," Walthour said, adding "it feeds on itself. It's just that they expect to win."

Abilities range from top AAU swimmers, he said, to girls who are competing for the first time.

"Nobody gets cut," Walthour promised.

He said the team gets a lot of mileage out of five-day-a-week workouts. "We cover 3,000 to 3,500 yards in an hour," he said, though that is only half the time that other schools dedicte.

Walthour said he never predicted how the team would fare in past years. This season is different, he admitted.

"I'm starting to believe we're going to do it again."

Now that he has entered his 25th year of coaching, Walthour said the girls promised to complete another undefeated season for his silver anniversary.

The swim season will open Sept. 18 with an alumni meet at the high school pool. Swimmers from former undefeated teams will compete against this year's swimmers.

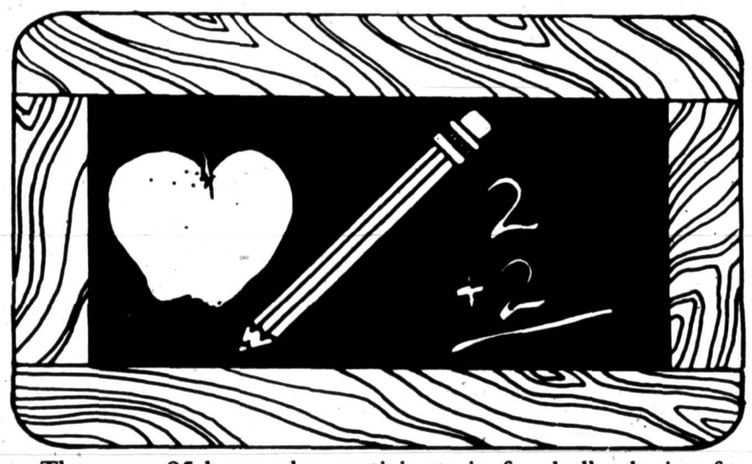
A NEWCOMER to the coaching staff is Bob Maruka, the head football coach.

As part of the Mission Trails Athletic League, the Carmel Padres football team will clash with high schools that include Pacific Grove, Robert Louis Stevenson and North Monterey County.



There are 95 boys who participate in football, playing for either freshman, junior varsity or varsity teams.

Though Carmel teams have been strong in the past, last year the varsity record was 4-6.

Maruka stated that he is still evaluating the team. However, this year varsity is "starting from the bottom," he said, adding the Padres do not have an experienced quarterback and are small compared to other teams.

"The biggest guy we have is 205 pounds," he remarked.

According to Maruka, he needs two years to build a good team. To achieve a championship season, "it takes persistence and patience and a lot of work," he said.

The Padres will kick off the football season Saturday, Sept. 6, when they host a football jamboree at the Carmel High School stadium.

THOUGH the students' interest in sports appears unlimited money to support their activities has slowly evaporated.

The passage of Proposition 13 and the Serrano-Pries decision, as well as declining enrollment lead to the initiation of a fee system.

Each student is required to pay $25 for each sport in which he or she participates.

However, no family must pay more than $100. Youngsters who cannot afford the fee, according to Feldeisen, can earn the money through a school employment program.

'It's just that they expect to win.'

"I figured if you give it to the kids, we might run into problems," he said.

Instead, they work for local businesses for a short time at minimum wage.

"People would write a check stating 'this is for Sally who worked in our store,' " he explained.

"It appears that these enthusiastic youngsters will pay any price to compete in their favorite sports."

'Carmel Youth Day' parade is planned

SUPPORT FOR CARMEL HIGH School will be the theme of a wine and cheese party with silent auction to be held Saturday, Sept. 6.

The Carmel City Council has proclaimed Sept. 6 "Carmel Youth Day" to let the community support area youth.

The festivities will begin with a football jamboree beginning at 1 p.m. at Carmel High. Four area teams will be participating: Carmel, Seaside, Pacific Grove and North County. After the games, at about 4 p.m., the Carmel High cheerleaders, football team and band combo will lead a parade of students, parents, fans and friends down Ocean Avenue and on San Carlos to Sunset Center.

Upon arrival, adult guests will be treated to wines from the Monterey Vineyard of Gonzalez. Cheese has been donated by La Casa Bodega, and hors d'oeuvres will be homemade by the Carmel High Boosters Club, sponsors of this fund-raising event.

A silent auction will be held from 4 to 7 p.m. to raise money for the athletic department. Local merchants and friends have contributed items to be bid upon. Dinners, services, jewelry and antiques are some of the selected items. Tickets may be purchased at the door to rooms 4 and 5 at Sunset Center.

Red and white flower corsages and banners will be in evidence as Carmel heralds the beginning of a new school year.

Carmel High's next home football game will be Oct. 11.

Meanwhile, water polo, girls' swimming and girls' volleyball will have home meets.

The Boosters' Club is starting its membership drive and making plans for its next fund-raising event, a dinner-dance Nov. 7.

State school budget: $8.2 billion

SACRAMENTO — CALIFORNIA'S 7,404 PUBLIC elementary and secondary schools begin the 1980-81 school year supported by a state education budget of $8.2 billion — eight percent more than last year.

The largest increases will go for general basic support, special education and child care services.

A breakdown of the 1980-81 education budget, including percentage comparisons with fiscal 1979-80, follows:

• SCHOOL IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM: Allows each participating school community to determine through a school site council what is needed to improve its school and how to go about doing it—$152.4 million, up 13 percent.

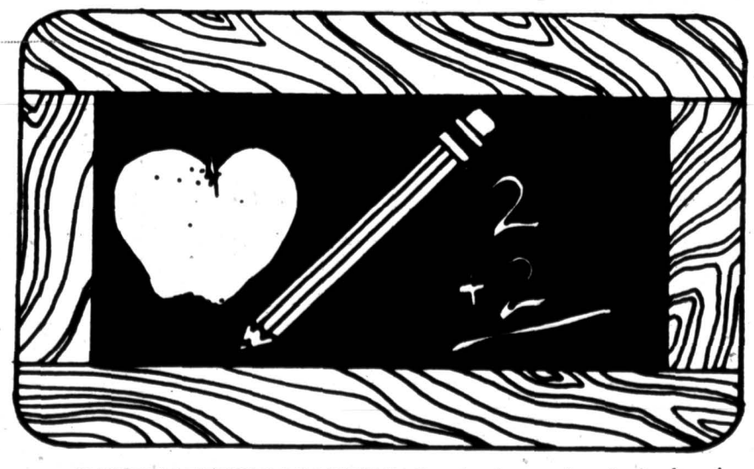
• CHILD DEVELOPMENT: Provides care for children of low-income working parents—$148.2 million, up 19 percent.

• CHILD NUTRITION: Helps pay the basic subsidy for all school meals served and supports the Meals for the Needy Program—$37.9 million, down 18 percent. This cut does not represent a reduction in per-meal support, but a revision of the projected number of meals to be served.

• URBAN IMPACT AID: Provides special support to 19 unified school districts that have additional urban education costs—$54.7 million, about the same as last year.

• ECONOMIC IMPACT AID: Provides special services for disadvantaged and limited and non-English-speaking students—$162 million, up 10 percent.

• PRESCHOOL EDUCATION: Provides special programs to help educationally disadvantaged children and children from low-income homes enter kindergarten on a more equitable basis with more advantaged children—$28.6 million, up 9 percent.



• INSTRUCTION MATERIAL: Assists schools in buying materials such as textbooks and films—$42.7 million, up 11 percent.

• INSTRUCTIONAL TELEVISION: Assists schools in conducting, purchasing or renting instructional TV programs—$821,364, same as last year.

• DRIVER TRAINING: $19.8 million, same as last year.

• MENTALLY GIFTED MINORS: Supports special programs for gifted children—$15.9 million, up 9 percent.

• ADULT EDUCATION: $149.1 million is set as a ceiling on state appropriations to school districts for this service.

• PORTABLE CLASSROOMS: Provides funds for the state to buy portable classrooms to lease to high-growth school districts—$13 million, same as last year.

• MILLER-UNRUH READING PROGRAM: Provides grants to school districts to hire reading specialists—$15.3 million, up 9 percent.

A holiday is an excuse for even more activity

By TERRI LEE ROBBE

HOLIDAY time!

And with the arrival of the Labor Day weekend fun events were in full swing. Black tie affairs gave way to barbecues, picnics, beach parties, birthday bashes (happy birthday, Ron Dewar!), a carnival and annual gala at the Beach and Tennis Club—not to mention the Carmelites who deserted the town for "let's-get-away-from-it-all" for a few days . . .

OPERA GREAT Elisabeth Schwarzkopf recently spent a week in Carmel—and it was a busy week, indeed.

Madam Schwarzkopf held a series of master classes at Hidden Valley in Carmel Valley. The participants practiced with the opera artist for four days—three-hour sessions mornings and evenings.

Never too busy to visit special people, Madam Schwarzkopf visited Rachel Morton of Carmel and there were misty eyes as the two great ladies shared tea and memories.

Rachel was leading soprano with Covent Garden Opera Company in London for five years and studied under Sir John Barbirolli. Madam Schwarzkopf sang with Barbirolli—so the two ladies had much to talk about.

Before leaving, Madam Schwarzkopf, in European fashion, kissed Rachel on both cheeks—then when reaching the door to leave—she turned and curtsied.

A great lady indeed—and moments to remember.

ANOTHER LOVELY LADY who especially enjoyed Elisabeth Schwarzkopf's Carmel visit is Anne Barrows, friend and companion to Mrs. Rachel Morton.

Anne was once a recitalist and her love of music was enhanced by sitting in on three of Madam Schwarzkopf's classes.

"She's one of the great sopranos of the world," said Anne. "Just watching her teach is an honor and an experience."

pine whispers

Another exciting event for Anne was the arrival of six friends who are in Carmel to share the Labor Day festivities. All the women are executive secretaries and they want to forget about "taking a letter" for a few days.

"We're all executive secretaries—only now we're called Executive Women International," said Anne.

The visitors are Agnes Herbst, Donna Swayze (who has been with the Los Angeles Times for many years), Geneva Olsen, Lorraine Petitfils, Chris Gillespie and Jean Gillespie.

IF YOU CAN DO a mean tarantella and boast of Italian heritage, then you probably attended the recent gala titled "The Tarantella Club Presents a Day in Sicily."

Carmelites Nancy Mineo and Larry Parent got together with Rose and John Catalano and Mike Marrotta—started the party idea rolling and ended up with more than 300 guests attending the affair held at Hyatt Del Monte.

The festivities started poolside where everyone enjoyed his favorite cocktail along with such good edibles as scampi, octopus, crab, oysters on the half shell, clams and other yummies.

To make sure the dinner had an Italian flavor, the main entree was fettucine—made with imported red, white and green spaghetti and shaped like an Italian flag. The dessert? Homemade cannoli, of course.

After dinner the high-steppers took to the dance floor and, according to Nancy, it was hysterical.

"You'd have to see it to believe it," said Nancy. "We danced in a circle, with each dancer taking a turn in the center doing his/her version of the tarantella."

And to make sure there was no lack of good wine, Ted and Vera Balesteri and Bert and Bella Cutino of Pebble Beach (owners of the Sardine Factory and The Butcher Shop) and John Pisto of Carmel (who owns the Whaling Station Inn) donated all the fruit of the vine.

Seen representing Carmel at the gala were Ceci and Firmin Brown and Col. Donner and Nancy Osborne.

The group had so much fun they've decided to hold the party as an annual affair.

So, best brush up on your tarantella!

NEVER A DULL MOMENT in the lives of Don and Maggie Hays.

The house is overrun with the Hays' offspring who were in town for the Concours d'Elegance and Labor Day festivities.

Newlyweds Curtis and Fay arrived from Chico, and Don Jr. and his friend, Lynn Oliver, traveled from Lake Tahoe. Donnie Watson ("I raised that kid and love him just like a son," said Maggie) was also at the Concours—and Donnie celebrated his birthday Aug. 27 (more on that later).

Maggie and Don decided to turn the house over to the young people while they headed to Bear Valley—ski and summer resort—to enjoy nature's beauty for a few days. Traveling with the Hays were Gene (a physics professor at the Postgrad School in Monterey) and Jo Crittenden.

Happy trails, Maggie!

JONATHAN JOSEPH ERICKSON made a stylish debut into the world at Community Hospital Aug. 7.

Attending the big event were six physicians including baby Jonathan's mother and father—Dr. Lola Steinbaum (internist) and Dr. C. David Erickson, general practitioner.

Jonathan enjoys keeping late hours, so he arrived at 12:55 a.m. and weighed seven pounds, seven ounces and was 21 inches in length. And, he has brown hair and blue eyes just like his big brother, Mark, 2½.

Baby Jonathan's maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Steinbaum of Southfield, Mich. His paternal grandparents are Dr. and Mrs. Carl Erickson of San Diego.

Equal rights reign in Jonathan's Carmel Valley home as dad shares diapering, bath time and getting up with Jonathan in the wee hours.

And just so he can keep up with brother Mark, Jonathan has already attended a birthday party and made hospital rounds with his mother. Jonathan has decided to keep mom at home until October, so dad, along with Dr. Thomas Kehl and Dr. John Morrison, are covering for Dr. Steinbaum.

Big brother Mark gets very concerned when baby Jonathan cries and also wants to know why he can't climb on the back of his motorcycle and take a spin.

Do Drs. Steinbaum and Erickson want their sons to grow up to become doctors?

"Not particularly," said Dr. Steinbaum. "But I think Mark is already hooked on the idea. He totally enjoys being in a hospital atmosphere and making rounds with me."

One thing for sure Jonathan—you won't have to worry about finding a doctor should you need one in the middle of the night.

And welcome to a beautiful world!

BABY JAMES JULIUS SHERRILL (also called "J.J." and "Shortie") is getting a lot of attention at the Seaside home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James L. Sherrill.

J.J. was born at Community Hospital at 7:43 p.m., Aug. 11 and weighed eight pounds, two ounces and was 20½ inches long. He has brown eyes and a head full of black hair.

His maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Julius Robinson of Louisiana. Paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. James Sherrill of North Carolina.

Baby J.J. won't have to worry about baby-sitters as he has four older sisters—Linda, 19; Barbara, 15; Pamela, 14; and Joanne, 11.

"It's really great to have a little one in the house again," said Mrs. Sherrill. "He's a good baby and only wakes up when he's hungry or wants his diaper changed."

J.J.'s dad, who works for PG&E, said that with all the women in the house he doesn't have to do any baby-sitting chores, but "as soon as he's old enough we'll be heading for the golf course—my favorite pasttime."

Welcome, baby J.J.!

THERE'S A NEW addition in the Pacific Grove home of Thomas and Eden Ward, and according to mom, baby Patrick Ryan Ward III likes to party at night and sleep all day.

Baby Patrick arrived at Community Hospital Aug. 8 at 8:06 a.m. and weighed nine pounds even and was 22 inches long.

His maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Vince Williams of Pebble Beach.

Paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ward II of West Palm Beach, Fla., who are visiting and helping the new mother, who has her hands full with the new baby and his older brother, Thomas Sean, 1½.

According to Mrs. Ward, Sean gets very upset when the new baby cries and showers him with kisses.

"Our dog Tash is worse than a nervous father," said Mrs. Ward. "He gets terribly upset when Patrick cries and starts to howl. Needless to say, Patrick gets instant attention.

Mother Eden also thinks that young Patrick looks as Irish as the day is long.

"He has a pug nose, dark blue eyes and an unbelievable amount of dark brown hair," she said.

Patrick's father works for Monterey Datsun and his mother makes cheesecake for the Old Row Cafe on Cannery Row.

Baby Patrick has already learned how to get his way. He refuses to sleep in his bassinet, so if his parents want to get any sleep, ease Sean's mind and stop Tash from howling, they have to let him share his parents' bed.

Welcome to the world, Patrick Ryan Ward III.

MRS. ALEXANDER HEID (Nona) has something special to celebrate these days—after all, it isn't everyone who has a street named for him.

The street now known as Via Nona Marie is a one-block street in front of the post office in Carmel Rancho Shopping Center—and was a gift to Nona from hubby Alex, who simply enjoys giving his wife unusual gifts.

The street was doanted to the American Cancer Society auction last year by developer Emilio Magliocco—so Alex made the high bid and presented the street to Nona.

THIS YEAR'S PEBBLE BEACH Concours d'Elegance is just a memory now—but for members of the Carmel-Pebble Beach Club XX, it marked their eighth year.

Club XX was organized by Dick and Betty Ghent in 1972, and since that time members have held an annual Concours day party.

Taking part in the fun of this year's party were the Ghents, Fred and Pauline Stanley, John and Marg Steakley, Alan and Dorothy Thomas, Dave and Joan Sailer, Dr. Jerry and Mary Martin, Florence Drake, Bob and Patty Burris, Ray and Shirley Chaffee, Phyllis Carminati, who was with Don Hubbard (the couple will be married Sept. 20 and plan to honeymoon in Tahiti), Betty and John Conley, Alex and Nona Heid, Herb and Shirley Vitt, Patricia Hunt, Nell Gnesa, and Jack and Nancy Currier (owners of the Rocky Point Restaurant down the coast).

WHERE TO SPEND the Labor Day weekend?

No doubts in the minds of Norma Jean and Max Hodges, who headed to their cabin at Rancho San Clemente—the old ranch which was homesteaded in the 1800s and later turned into a private resort.

The ranch is a 45-minute drive out the Carmel Valley road and has almost every facility for fun and relaxation—two lakes, tennis courts, picnic grounds—everything!

The ranch is owned by Mr. and Mrs. Michael Dormody, but each cabin is privately owned.

Also spending the holiday at the ranch with the Hodges were Fred and Pauline Stanley.

It's been a busy couple of weeks for the Stanleys, who enjoyed the Concours d'Elegance (the Club XX group)—then took a two-day trip out of town, arriving back in time to get son Chris off to Loyola Marymount University—and then the big holiday!

Nancy McBrayer is wed

William Edgett and Nancy McBrayer

Nancy Gay McBrayer, daughter of Mrs. Darlene P. McBrayer of Carmel, and William Kenneth Edgett III, son of Mrs. James R. Mark of Canoga Park and Kenneth W. Edgett Jr. of Hatfield, Pa., were united in marriage Aug. 16.

The garden ceremony was held at the home of the bride, with the Rev. Rex Burns officiating.

The bride wore a cream-colored quiana knit gown trimmed with antique lace. She carried three long-stemmed white roses.

Maid of honor was Erika Antillon of Woodland Hills. She wore an off-the-shoulder dress of burgundy gauze and carried two long-stemmed roses.

Bridesmaids were Susan Knight of Augora and Deidre Garrison of Sebastopol. Both wore apricot-colored cotton dresses and carried long-stemmed, sterling silver roses.

Best man was Randy Kelly of Canoga Park.

The groom's attendants were James R. Mark of Canoga Park and Kenneth William Edgett Jr. of Hatfield, Pa.

The bride is a 1974 graduate of El Camino Real High School in Woodland Hills. She is manager of Mark Fenwick, Carmel Plaza.

The groom is a 1970 graduate of North Pennsylvania High School and attended Pierce Junior College, Woodland Hills, and South Coast College, Orange County. He owns and operates K.W. Edgett Landscape and Gardening Service.

Sixty guests attended the reception at the bride's Carmel home.

Out-of-town guests included Vera Antillon of Woodland Hills, Kathy Sheely of Canoga Park, Sylvia O'Hickey of Beverly Hills, Sue Banks of Encino, Kay Hanes of Santa Monica, Janet Edgett of Hatfield, Pa. and Janet Garrison of Sebastopol.

The couple will live in Carmel.

Carmel Woman's Club keeps up 55-year tradition

"The objects of this club shall be mutual help, intellectual advancement, social enjoyment and united effort for the welfare of the community."

Carmel Woman's Club bylaws

By TERRI LEE ROBBE

THE CARMEL WOMAN'S Club was organized in 1925.

On Dec. 6 of that year 54 women met at the Pine Inn and signed their names as charter members of the club.

In the early years they met at various places, the Pine Inn, La Ribera Hotel and the Girl Scout House.

In 1935, the club was incorporated as a nonprofit organization, and the growing membership began to look forward to acquiring a permanent home.

On July 31, 1940, a letter from the board announced the purchase of two lots on the corner of San Carlos and Ninth Avenue. Construction of the clubhouse began June 7, 1948, and it was opened at the members' meeting on the first Monday in January 1949.

"It's hard to believe now, but those lots were $2,000 each at that time," said Mrs. Yvonne Simms, club president.

"Over the years we've really grown and now have a membership of 160.

"Owing to the devoted efforts of the members, they were able to burn the mortgage on the building on Monday, June 2, 1958, and now own it free of any encumbrance," said Mrs. Simms.

"We now have year-round activities and the club is very popular with local women."

Mrs. Simms and her husband, Dr. F.F. Simms, retired to Carmel in 1977 from Austin, Texas.

They both lived in New Orleans and met when Simms was a sophomore at Louisiana State University Medical School. Mrs. Simms graduated from Newcomb College of Tulane University in New Orleans and later became curator of a medical museum.

The Simms have two children, Cicily Corsbie, a lawyer in Austin, and Shelley Simms, who works with the Health, Education and Welfare Department in Washington, D.C. Their grandson, Ben, 3, is Cicily's son.

"The American College of Surgeons meets every year and, since my husband was a surgeon, we always attended the meetings," said Mrs. Simms. "Every third year they meet in San Francisco and it was on one of these trips that we came to Carmel to visit. We decided then and there that we would retire to this area."

Dr. Dorothy Danno

Mrs. Simms' hobbies are golf, cooking and entertaining at small dinner parties.

"I grew up in New Orleans where they take their food very seriously," said Mrs. Simms, adding that she enjoys trying new recipes and adding a few touches of her own.

'We're real Carmel boosters," said Mrs. Simms. "I joined the Carmel Woman's Club in 1977 and enjoy being part of the organization. As president, I'm trying to organize some new activities."

MRS. SIMMS said that club members meet each Monday and enjoy a variety of activities. Special meetings with entertainment are held the first Monday of each month.

"We've had some excellent entertainment such as The Chordaleers, puppeteers and Greek dancers," said Dr. Dorothy Danno, the club's second vice president. "We especially enjoyed artist and historian George Stuart who gave a talk on Fall of the Czars.

Dr. Danno was club president for 1977-79 and now works closely with Mrs. Simms on club projects.

Dr. Danno practiced otolaryngology in San Francisco for 30 years. She graduated from the University of California in Berkeley (Phi Beta Kappa), then attended the University of California Medical School in San Francisco, graduating in 1939. She interned at Children's Hospital in San Francisco and trained in otolaryngology, certified by the specialty board. She was also assistant clinical professor at the University of California, San Francisco.

Dr. Danno is married to Bartholomew "Ming" Danno, a rancher before retirement. He was active in soil conservation and was an avid hunter and fisherman. He still enjoys hunting, fishing and gardening.

The Dannos retired to Carmel in 1973 and have three daughters — Dianne Nelson of San Francisco, Betty Brady of Vienna, Va., and Anne Delfino of Sunnyvale.

The Dannos have 11 grandchildren.

"I've been a member of the Woman's Club since 1974 and thoroughly enjoy it," said Dr. Danno. "We have a variety of activities including 'game day' on the second Monday of each month. This is our day for bridge, dominoes, canasta and mah-jongg, a Chinese game played with colorful tiles."

Dr. Danno explained that the third Monday of the month offers a book review or travel program illustrated with the slides.

The last Monday of the month is "House and Garden" day and features a guest speaker on subjects such as flower arranging, plant care and interior decorating.

BOTH MRS. SIMMS and Dr. Danno talked about the various fund-raising activities of the club.

"Our fund-raising event for 1979 was a benefit luncheon which was a lot of fun," said Mrs. Simms. "Each person brought a hat that was somehow special in their lives. Prizes were awarded for the largest hat, the most unusual, funniest, etc."

Another popular fund-raising event was a cooking demonstration given by the Golden Grain Macaroni Co. "We certainly ended up with some very interesting recipes," said Dr. Danno.

The women explained that all proceeds from the fund-raising events go to local organizations including Meals on Wheels, which has received a donation from the club each of the past three years.

Donations have also been given to the YWCA of the Monterey Peninsula, the Children's Theatre, the Monterey Peninsula Volunteer Services and the Monterey Peninsula Symphony.

Although the husbands are not club members, they offer their services to the women for things such as moving furniture, repair work and cleaning up after club events. They're also invited to open meetings to hear guest speakers.

"We're not a static organization," said Dr. Danno. "Our members come and go, so our membership is not confined to the residents of Carmel. We have members from various areas of the Monterey Peninsula."

The club has a board which meets the second Monday of the month throughout the year.

The executive committee is: Mrs. Simms, president; Bernice Imlay, first vice president; Dr. Danno, second vice president; Margaret Philbrook, third vice president; Pat Pierce, recording secretary; Marian Miller, corresponding secretary, and Marvel Taylor, treasurer.

The standing committees are: Berta Melanson, hospitality; Lillian Yale, publicity; Maria Hilton, Beth Lombard and Dorothy Hale, programs; Bebe Moothart, games; Minna Klein, rental, and Helen Anderson, Verna Test and Olga Scheffler, ways and means.

Other officers are: Hermie Johnson, friendship bridge, Margaret Fenton, budget; Ursula Mulrooney, library, and [illegible] and Mabel Williams, nominating. Mary [illegible]arian

Board changes meeting day

The Harrison Memorial Library board will conduct its regular meetings on the fourth Tuesday of every month rather than the third Thursday, according to head librarian Jo Childers.

The decision was made by the board at its meeting Thursday, Aug. 28. Mrs. Childers said the new date will give the board members more time to study financial reports prior to the meeting.

The next meeting is scheduled for 4 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 28 at City Hall.

The library will also be open until 9 p.m. on Thursdays beginning Oct. 1. The library now closes at 6 p.m. on Thursdays.

PRICING YOUR HOUSE RIGHT

The value of your house is not what you think it is — or what the buyer thinks. It is determined chiefly by the location, the neighborhood, and the current market. An overpriced house sitting on the market for months becomes almost impossible to sell. So first, you must get in line with the market. That means a realistic appraisal.

Nobody — but nobody — is more acutely aware of the current housing market than your local Realtor. A capable Realtor can bring in his own appraisal expert or even a team of salesmen who will individually price your home and then reach a fair concensus. Or you can hire a qualified independent appraiser. You may be pleasantly surprised to find out that you were intending to price your house for less than its fair market value.

If possible, your price should include curtains, draperies, refrigerator, dishwasher built-ins. It's a better package deal and may hasten the sale.

Veteran teacher opens the world to their eyes

By STEVE HELLMAN

STUDENTS WHO ENROLL in Peter Lyon's history class at Carmel High School will have their eyes opened to the role of revolution and change.

Discussion during the semester will center on an understanding of history and current events to prepare for the future.

Topics will range from the proletarian experiment in the Paris Commune of 1871 to exercises in modern-day environmentalism and pitfalls in the two-party political system.

Lyon may discourse on Alvin Toffler's Future Shock, the celebrated 1970 book that proposed ways of coping with the apocalyptic pace of change in the world today.

Lyon's students may also be treated to an Aristotlean phrase — "Poverty is the parent of revolution and crime," or greeted with a simple Zen saying — "When student is ready to learn, the teacher is there."

Lyon says his passion in teaching is to equip young people with the survival tools for tomorrow, and in his 21 years at Carmel High School he has initiated some unusual courses to maintain that goal.

HE PARTICIPATED in the Grey Fox School, a loosely structured, seminar program at Carmel High School in 1974-78. He spearheaded a course titled Revolutionary Change in America, and developed Project Community, a course in daily survival techniques from buying a car to turning off the gas in your house.

Contoversial among parents and well-liked by students, Lyon is a tall, angular man with a distinguished shock of gray hair, intense dark eyes and a mouth that tosses out words with an effusiveness close to controlled abandon.

Interviewed two weeks before the start of school, Lyon spoke fervently of the school system's most important job: meeting the needs of students in an increasingly complex and faster-moving world. It is a job that he insists is not being adequately performed in the face of attacks on public education and declining funding.

'Because the community is so many diverse communities — retired people, military, tourists — I've never felt that it takes care of its people.'

Nearly all of his innovative courses have been eliminated in the wake of funding cuts since Proposition 13, he said.

He decried the tendency of schools to be rigid, to stifle independent thought as though they were prisons or the military.

He threw up his hands at what he identified as the trend among students to question less and to seek good grades instead of the greatest possible knowledge.

He recalled revolutions in curriculum and teaching methods that stand as cornerposts in his career, but he added that the schools today are not keeping up with social and political movement.

"It's a very unsettled world," he said. "Nowadays nobody is talking about revolution, they're just trying to hang on."

Despite the financial blows from Proposition 13 that undercut his innovative classes, and the change in student values since the '60s, Lyon said he retains much of his idealism about teaching.

And despite what he says is a lack of activism and dedication to young people in the local community, Lyon said he intends to remain living and working here.

IT MAY BE that his blood is no stranger to struggle or Carmel itself.

His hunger to seek out answers and to serve people goes back through an ancestry of pioneers, explorers, an inventor who helped develop long-distance telephone communication and a former Carmel mayor.

With the grandiose flourish of a history teacher, Lyon traced his family lineage back through major events and several royal houses of history.

His ancestry goes back to the Gaul empire that stretched over Central Europe, mainly in what is now modern France and Germany. Julius Caesar conquered Gaul during the Gallic Wars (58-51 B.C.,) and Lyon's people were ruled by Rome until the Germans took over in the fifth and sixth centuries.

His people came to England with William the Conquerer, the king of Germany who fled his country during the proletarian revolution of 1848. William returned to Germany in 1849 to crush the republican insurrection and establish his reign through the conservative prime minister, Bismarck.

Rather than return under the reign of William, Lyon's ancestors remained in England. They eventually divided, again along lines of revolution, with some crossing the Atlantic to America in a sister ship of the Mayflower and others remaining behind to become distant relatives of the royal house of England.

"Queen Elizabeth's mother is a distant relative of mine," Lyon said in mock pride, "exceedingly distant."

His great-grandfather, Israel Whitney Lyon, came to San Francisco from Philadelphia in 1851 aboard the clipper ship Flying Cloud. It made the voyage in a record 90 days around Cape Horn; his great-grandfather was a ship's baker.

"He settled in Stockton as a baker," Lyon said. "He later apprenticed to a dentist and became a pretty decent pliers man."

His great-grandfather also patented Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder in 1866. The product is still around, although no longer owned by the Lyon family, he noted.

His grandfather, Edward Holden Lyon, was an inventor. He helped Alexander Graham Bell develop the relay switching system for long-distance telephones, and was at the other end of the line in 1876 when Bell called from Philadelphia to New York, Lyon said.

"Grandfather helped invent the system," Lyon recalled, "but he didn't get any of the credit."

YOUNG PETER LYON was 4 when his father, Horace D. Lyon, brought the family to Carmel in 1937.

Lyon recalled: "My father and his brother ran the tooth powder business. Father later became an economist, market analyst and ran an insurance business in Carmel.

"His greatest claim to fame was being mayor of Carmel from 1952 to '57."

His father was also an avid photographer, and helped produce the book Jeffers' Country, Lyon said.

On his mother's side, Lyon's uncle Duncan McDuffie was a friend of naturalist John Muir and a founder of the Save the Redwoods League.

Lyon graduated from Carmel High School in 1950, a young man with a talent for writing who wanted to become a newspaperman.

He enrolled at Stanford University, graduated in 1954 and came back to the Monterey Peninsula, where he entered the Defense Language Institute, later serving a two-year Army stint in Europe. He returned home after his discharge, wiser and with a strong dislike for the military.

"I saw what the Army was about at that time — destruction — and I didn't want to continue with it," he said. "I wanted to do something more than business, I wanted to help people."

Although neither his father nor mother ever attended college, Lyon returned to academia for direction. He entered graduate studies at the University of California at Berkeley. His goal was to receive a college teaching credential, a goal that was later revised to a high school credential.

"I became more interested in high school work than a college job," he said. "It was the difference between teaching or publishing."

Unbeknownst to Lyon upon his graduation from Berkeley, his name was on a placement list in 1959 that landed on the desk of Stuart Mitchell, superintendent of the Carmel Unified School District. While Lyon was a student at Carmel High, Mitchell had been principal. Without an interview or even a request from Lyon, he was hired.

"I didn't even know I had been hired," Lyon said, "until my father saw a notice of it in the Pine Cone."

LYON HAS TAUGHT at the high school ever since, and despite his frustration over problems in public education and what he considers negative changes in the community, he said he intends to keep his roots here.

His wife, Shelly Klingensmith, is an elementary school teacher at Moss Landing, and he has three sons from a previous marriage, two grown and one a senior at Carmel High School.

He divides his time from teaching with jogging, tennis, furniture refinishing, carpentry and repairing a bright orange, four-cylinder '67 Porsche.

Of the community, he complained that it has lost much of its charm and character in the face of increasing crowds and diversity.

'Nowadays nobody is talking about revolution, they're just trying to hang on.'

"There are more people in Carmel on a cold wet February morning than I ever saw as a kid on July 4th," he said.

"Because the community is so many diverse communities — retired people, military, tourists — I've never felt that it takes care of its people."

Of its young people, he said, "This is a community that shuts young people out of its activities."

The high school is no longer the center of social activities it once was, he lamented.

"There are too many demands, too much else going on for our youngsters," he said. "They're either holding down a job or taking care of brothers and sisters while their single parents are working."

He said of the students: "They're disillusioned, many of them. They see the president saying one thing and doing another. So many see their parents doing no more than getting by. We're not an activist community."

Why does he remain in the community, instead of seeking out a more active place?

"My attraction to Carmel is a very powerful thing," he replied.

"There is about Carmel that beauty and quiet that Jeffers saw, and that my father also saw in the country."

Every time he has gotten fed up and considered moving elsewhere, he said, he realized how much he would miss the area. He lives on Lupin Road in Carmel Valley in a home that he spends many hours on landscaping and remodeling.

And his role as educator remains a constant source of purpose and excitement in his life, a role he envisions with growing importance.

"Parents are desperately worried about what's going to happen to their children in this very unsettled world," he said. "They are desperate to have their kids educated, but I'm not certain we're keeping up, the future keeps coming at us so fast."

If the schools are to maintain their survival value for students, he said, it requires new methods, new avenues, new ideas and freedom in teaching.

"Kids have to have fun learning and they have to have the independence to learn how and what they want," Lyon said.

"Schools don't tolerate enough independence; it revolves too much around roll call and telling you what to do — like the military and prison."

"I stay in the job," Lyon concluded, "because it's one way we can show people how to open their eyes to change."

Sports store opens near The Barnyard

By FLORENCE MASON

SPORTS BARN
Fausto Galang and family

"Why a new sports store near The Barnyard?

"We thought people looking for sports-related items needed one place to go for everything and that this particular location would be convenient. Also, we thought it would be fun!"

That's what Fausto Galang said about the latest Galang family enterprise—the Sports Barn in the Clock Tower Building facing The Barnyard.

The family includes Galang's wife, Lydia, their daughter Gigi (21) and sons Mike (20) and Anthony (17). Gigi Galang is the manager of the new store; Mrs. Galang and the two boys work there and also go back and forth to another family enterprise, Fausto's in Carmel Valley Village. Groceries and gasoline are sold there.

The Sports Barn, which opened in July, offers a great variety of sports-related items. Just a few: shoes, clothing, equipment, Frisbees, luggage, rackets and even a one-day racket stringing service. Sports buffs will be glad to learn that this is one place where they can buy the "shoo-goo" that helps to prolong the life (or soles, at least) of sports shoes.

This sports store is a natural environment for the Galang family. All are active in sports themselves, primarily tennis.

They have lived in the area 10 years, and all three of the young people are graduates of Carmel High School.

Fausto Galang had been in advertising and public relations for Union Carbide here and in New York. When the company moved all of its activities back to New York, Galang chose to stay in Carmel. "You'll understand that!" he said, laughing.

Mrs. Galang not only plays tennis, but finds time to serve as a volunteer with the Alliance on Aging. Mr. and Mrs. Galang are also active in Cursillo, a Christian movement.

MERRITT ASSOCIATES
Michael and Constance Minnemeyer

They were willing to work toward their goal for 12 years and now it's a reality.

The Minnemeyers, general partners in Merritt Associates, recently opened their own offices to develop real estate. Minnemeyer is an architectural designer; together they buy and redevelop real estate. The firm also accepts commissions for space planning and other design activities.

The 12-year path to this enterprise involved other jobs: Minnemeyer came here originally as manager of the Monterey Hastings store, while Mrs. Minnemeyer managed a small manufacturing company and was a trust officer for several years.

It also involved a stint in Southern California while both acquired college degrees. Minnemeyer's is in architecture from the University of California; his wife's is in English from UCLA.

After working in Los Angeles for a while the couple returned to the place where they wanted to settle and, for the last four years, Minnemeyer worked for other architectural firms.

Then it began to look possible for them to branch out on their own and the formation of a limited partnership gave them the necessary financial backing; Merritt Associates became a reality. Their office is at Ocean and Mission above the Canton Restaurant.

The name "Merritt Associates" is not unrelated to the Minnemeyers. It is the first name of the young lady, now 3, who lives with them in Pebble Beach—their daughter.

SUNRISE GIFTS
Lillian Shadwell and Thea Schonwalder

The owners of this gift shop in the Court of the Golden Eagle (on the east side of Lincoln between Ocean and Seventh) met in Big Sur.

The fact that both were of German origin brought them together. Now their friendship has become a business partnership.

Why did they choose that name for their new store? "Because I like sunrises!" said Thea Schonwalder. They decided on a shop with many different kinds of gifts because there already seemed to be so many specialty stores in this area.

"There is a little bit of everything," Ms. Shadwell said. "We have imported things, small carpets from Kashmir, mineral gifts, leather items, jewlery with semi-precious stones . . ." Many are imports from South Africa.

Ms. Shadwell has been on the Peninsula since 1959, much of that time working in the Big Sur area, where she still lives. She owned Glen Oaks Restaurant in Big Sur; five years ago she sold it and went to work as a bookkeeper at the River Inn. She has five children, all grown.

Mrs. Schonwalder had owned a gift shop in South Africa, so her experience fitted in with the business experience of her new friend. She and her husband live near Highway 1 south of Carmel.

State decline in enrollment is about to end

Capitol News Service

SACRAMENTO — ATTENDANCE in California schools will begin to increase after 1982, predicts Wilson Riles, state superintendent of public instruction.

While enrollment in the state's elementary school system has been on the decline for some time, that trend is ending, according to projections by the state Department of Finance.

New estimates on enrollment in kindergarten for this year show a four percent increase. Compared with a decline in grades 1-12 and an increase in community college enrollment, it indicates that the slump in the birth rate which has affected school enrollment is passing through the school system and is now seen in declining enrollment in junior and senior high schools.

Riles qualified the projections, pointing out they reflect statewide trends and may not be pertinent to all school districts. Some areas of the state are growing so fast that enrollment in elementary and secondary schools is creating pressure for new schools. On the other hand, in other areas, schools are being forced to close because of a decline in enrollment.

Nevertheless, fall 1980 enrollment in kindergarten through the 12th grade is expected to decrease 1.2 percent from last year. However, nearly one quarter of the California population will be in school, either at the elementary, secondary or community college level.

RILES ALSO announced information on the ethnic breakdown in the state schools.

California schools absorbed the highest percentage of the Indochinese refugees, in far greater proportion than any other state. According to the U.S. Department of Education, 26 percent of the Indochinese refugees enrolled in all states are in California schools. That represents 17,394 students. The state with the next highest refugee enrollment, Texas, has 5,427.

Hispanic enrollment increased about six percent. That group now represents 23 percent of the school population in California.

Asians also showed an increase of 1.3 percent, and overall represent 4.31 percent of California students in elementary and secondary schools.

Other minorities in the school system are black, 10 percent; Filipino, 1.4 percent; and American Indian, 0.91.

Procedure listed for free, reduced-price school lunch

Carmel Unified School District has announced its procedures and eligibility scale for free and reduced-price meals and free milk for children unable to pay the full price under the national school lunch, school breakfast and special milk programs.

Children from families whose income is at or below the levels shown in the chart are eligible for free meals and milk or reduced-price meals. In addition, families not meeting the criteria but with other unusual expenses due to unusually high medical expenses, housing costs in excess of 30 percent of income, special education expenses due to the mental or physical condition of a child and disaster or casualty losses are urged to apply. Application forms are available at the principal's office in each school. The information provided on the application is confidential and will be used only to determine eligibility for meals or milk.

In certain cases, foster children are also eligible.

The director of community services will review applications and determine eligibility. If parents are dissatisfied with the ruling of the official, they may wish to discuss the decision with the determining official on an informal basis. If they wish to make a formal appeal, they may make a request either orally or in writing to William Rand, Superintendent, P.O. Box 222700, Carmel 93922, or phone 624-1546 for a hearing to appeal the decision.

If a family member becomes unemployed or if family size changes, the family should contact the school to file a new application.

PULL THE PLUG ON FOREIGN OIL

Over the last 7 years, fuel cost increases alone have doubled the price of electricity.

Based on typical home usage

California depends heavily on imported oil for the production of electricity. And the more electricity we use, the more foreign oil we need to produce it.

Every time OPEC raises its prices, electric rates go up, too. The cost of oil today is more than ten times what it was in 1970. And the cost of electricity is rising with it. OPEC oil increases push up natural gas prices, too.

But there is something we can do about it.

By using less electricity, we lessen our need for foreign oil. And that helps hold down electric bills.

So if we start thinking differently about energy now, there may come a time when we won't need all that foreign oil.

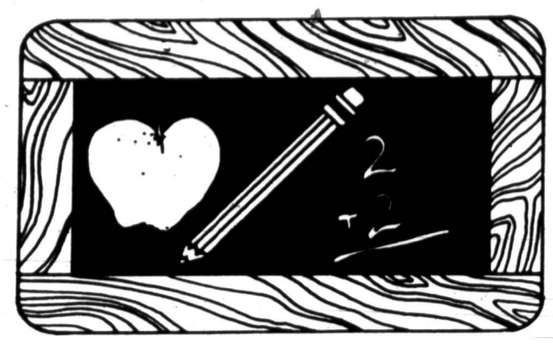
Seniors beware: testing for proficiency is here



SACRAMENTO — THOUSANDS OF CALIFORNIA high school seniors — and their parents — will be bitterly disappointed if they don't take remedial efforts in basic skills seriously between now and next spring.

That's the warning of Alex Law, chief of the state Department of Education's Office of Program Evaluation and Research.

"The disappointment will come," Law pointed out, "if the seniors flunk new locally-developed proficiency tests in reading, mathematics and writing—and thus fail to earn a high school diploma."

For the first time, he said, California students must demonstrate mastery of the basics before graduation, as required by Assembly Bill 3408.

A cross-sectional survey of 155 school districts shows that the failure rate could be higher than the 7.8 percent rate (about 20,000 students) predicted by a state study last year.

Although some districts are working hard at gearing up remedial programs, Law warned that even more intensive efforts are needed by all districts during the coming year because of the short time available to prepare seniors for the new standards. To help them, the department is organizing a special task force to augment their efforts.

Law said the purpose of the program is not to fail students who take the test. "The real point is to provide early identification of students who have deficiencies in their basic skills and to provide them an appropriate remedial program," he said.

The survey disclosed that 90 percent of the students who responded had taken one or more proficiency tests, and that three-quarters of them felt the tests were "about the right degree of difficulty."

"One of the most disturbing things we've learned from the survey," Law said, "is that not enough parents are attending school conferences called to help set up remedial programs for students who fail the tests."

He cited these findings:

- In 25 percent of the districts surveyed, less than half of the parents of failing students attended conferences called by schools to help plan remedial activities.
- In about 10 percent of the sample districts, less than one-fourth of the parents came to scheduled conferences.

"With less than a year left before diplomas are to be withheld from students who fail to meet proficiency standards," Law pointed out, "this failure to become involved is serious. Parents must get the message that this could have heavy consequences for their children."

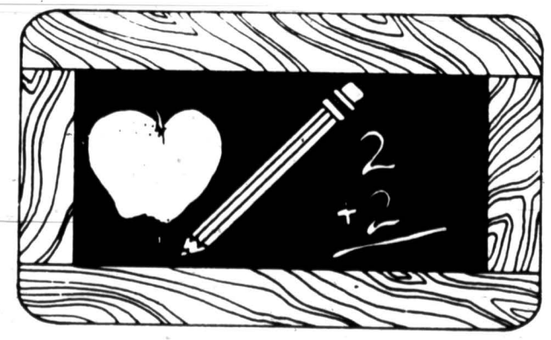
Initiated by the state Legislature in 1976 (Assembly Bill 3408) and modified in 1977 (Assembly Bill 65), the laws mandating the program require the following:

- All pupils must be tested at least once in grades 4-6, once in grades 7-9 and again in grades 10-11.
- High school students who fail proficiency tests must be invited, along with a parent or guardian, to confer with school officials on how to help the student master the required basic skills.
- Remedial instruction must be provided until the student has, in the words of the law, "been given numerous opportunities to achieve mastery."
- Content, degree of difficulty and passing levels of the proficiency tests must be determined by local school boards.

California is one of 38 states requiring proficiency standards. Seventeen, in addition to California, require a passing grade on the high school test before students receive a high school diploma.

For more information about California's minimum proficiency standards, call or write David Gordon, assistant chief of the Office of Program Evaluation and Research, California State Department of Education, 721 Capitol Mall, Sacramento 95814; (916) 322-5010.

California broadening education for handicapped



SACRAMENTO — A REFORM EFFORT for handicapped children will soon be operating in every school in the state.

Wilson Riles, state superintendent of public instruction, said the culminating victory came this summer when Gov. Brown signed Senate Bill 1870.

"This historic legislation expands the Master Plan for Special Education over a two-year transitional period to the entire state," Riles said. "It will result in major improvements in educational services for handicapped children and young people from age 3 to 21."

Under the Master Plan, Riles explained, handicapped children are freed from the stigma of labels. It replaces such labels as "mentally retarded" and "emotionally disturbed" with the umbrella phrase "individuals with exceptional needs" Under earlier state laws, schools had to label children before they could receive special education funds.

Under the Master Plan, schools must serve all of the following:

- All handicapped persons enrolled in kindergarten through 12th grade.
- All 19- to 21-year-olds who qualify for special education and who have not finished high school.
- Those 3- to 4-year-olds who require intensive special education services.

Since initial implementation five years ago, the Master Plan has expanded rapidly across the state. In 1975-76, six regions pioneered the program. Four more regions were added the following year, and seven more were added in 1978-79. Five additional areas joined the Master Plan last fall, bringing the total number of handicapped students enrolled in the program to about 100,000—about 28 percent of all handicapped students in the state. Two years from now, Riles said, the figure will be 100 percent, or more than 360,000 pupils.

Under SB 1870, state funding for the Master Plan and special education is increased $100 million this year from fiscal 1979-80. Total funding for special education in California during fiscal 1980-81 will be $1.08 billion—$823 million from the state, $200 million from local sources and $57 million from the federal government.

The Office of Special Education has established two hotlines to answer questions about SB 1870. Questions relating to the bill should be directed to (800) 952-5698 or (916) 445-7427. General questions about special education that are not related to SB 1870 should be directed to Leslie Brinegar, administrator, Consultant Services for Northern California, (916) 323-4750, or Allan Simmons, administrator, Consultant Services for Southern California, (213) 620-4262.

23 million adults in U.S. are 'functionally illiterate'

By ANTHONY BRANDT

WE HEAR A GREAT deal about the literacy crisis, and a great deal of criticism has been directed at the educational system for causing it.

Some 23 million adult Americans are "functionally illiterate," unable to read newspapers or fill out job application forms, and schools regularly produce large numbers of students who cannot pass easy minimum-competency tests.

Critics lay the blame variously upon poor teaching, ill-advised teaching methods like the "look-and-say" method for teaching children to read, and on the long trend in education away from the basics, a trend that reached its peak in the 1960s and early 1970s.

The problem, however, may have less to do with the educational system than with changes in public values.

ALMOST FROM THE BEGINNING of the settlement of this country, Americans were known for enjoying unusually high levels of literacy.

By 1765, John Adams could claim that "a native of America who cannot read or write is as rare an appearance as . . . a comet or an earthquake." Adams' statement reflected the especially high literacy rate in his own New England, where Puritan ideology predominated; the Puritans believed strongly in the value of access to the Bible, to the word of God and to that end went to great lengths to make sure that their children were literate.

Servant indentures required masters to teach their servants and apprentices to read and write if they could not already do so. Families were examined regularly by Puritan divines to see whether parents were teaching their children to read and write.

The New England colonies established schools everywhere that the population was concentrated enough to support them. Historians attribute this zeal for literacy almost entirely to Puritanism; a Puritan had to be able to read to gain direct access to the Word and save his unregenrate soul from the vividly imagined fires of Hell.

Later, when religious feeling declined, literacy became a way up and out of one's economic or social circumstances. If one wanted to rise, to become involved in the nation's political life, to master the complexities of an increasingly industrialized environment, it was essential to be literate.

The educational system of the late 18th and 19th centuries was much poorer than what we have today, all talk about little red schoolhouses notwithstanding; the quality of teaching was low, facilities were grossly inadequate and many children did not attend school at all.

Yet, by 1850 the adult literacy rate for both males and females had reached 90 percent. That was higher than the rate in any European country except Sweden; it was also considerably higher than the percentage of children attending school. The country was full of self-made readers and writers, people who had struggled to become literate but for whom the struggle had real meaning and definite rewards.

THE MEANING IS STILL THERE, and rewards are still available, but we no longer seem to care. For whatever reason — television, widespread anomie, the anti-intellectualism that is also part of our history — we don't value literacy as we once did.

The public worries about the high rates of functional illiteracy and talks nostalgically about a return to the three Rs, but that same public spends an average of nearly 30 hours a week per person watching television. Half of that public, according to a survey by the Book Industry Study Group, never reads any kind of book; and it writes prose, when it writes at all, that has led to talk of a "writing crisis" on top of the literacy crisis.

This loss of commitment to literacy comes at a time when the demand for higher and higher levels of literacy is growing. Yesterday's functional literacy is dysfunctional today. Jobs require more education today, not less, high technology and an increasingly bureaucratized way of life demand more reading, more writing than ever.

In 1939, the Navy's most sophisticated weapons system came with a technical manual of 500 pages. Its most avanced system in 1978 came with 300,000 pages of documentation. In spite of what Marshall McLuhan and other prophets of a printless society may claim, literacy remains indispensable.

WHAT THE HISTORY of literacy demonstrates is that preserving literacy is not and never has been a function that belongs solely to the schools. A highly literate society evolves out of deeply held values, values that cannot be isolated in a school system but must permeate the whole society.

Unless we recover those values we put ourselves in serious danger. "If a nation expects to be ignorant and free, in a state of civilization," wrote Thomas Jefferson, "it expects what never was and never will be."

Access to beach at Carmel Point to be improved

By JOANNE HODGEN

THE BEACH ACCESS area at Carmel Point will be improved by Monterey County now that it has received a grant of $19,500 from the California Coastal Conservancy.

Funds were awarded in early August in response to a county application for money to provide parking on the beach side of the road, foot paths, fencing and repairs to the stairs at the beach.

The county has not determined when improvements will begin.

The county Public Works Department also requested grant money to widen a portion of Scenic Road on Carmel Point and convert it to one-lane, one-way traffic.

However, the conservancy ruled that work cannot be done without the guidance of the county's Local Coastal Program (LCP) for the unincorporated area around Carmel.

Improved public access to the Carmel River State Beach and enhanced recreational use of the shoreline are major components of the LCP. Protection of fragile natural resources is also required.

ED DEMARS, director of the county Planning Department, said in May that county funds were not available for improvements on Carmel Point.

He advised the county Board of Supervisors in a memorandum April 25 that the Conservancy had initiated a program to provide up to $20,000 in matching funds to improve coastal accessways.

The supervisors approved the resolution, although the county could not match the $20,000.

Many residents were alarmed to learn that the county applied for funds to widen and convert Scenic Road to a one-way street at the hairpin curve known as "Jean Arthur's Point."

'There's no way of widening the turn further. It will be suspended in mid-air.'

One resident remarked: "There's no way of widening the turn further. It will be suspended in mid-air."

Mo Orett, county public works director, said after the Conservancy decision the county has no plans to widen Scenic Road at this time.

The only road widening, he said, will be on the beach side to provide parking spaces.

The county has met opposition to one-way conversion of Scenic Road in the past. In 1957 and 1962, there was significant resident opposition to plans for a one-way format the entire length of Scenic Road.

Travel lane improvement and other work on Scenic Road will be financed by the county. In April, DeMars said it could provide about $4,000.

Catherine Woodward, active in the Citizens Advisory Committee for the Local Coastal Program, is a Carmel Point resident.

She said a misunderstanding that arose between the county and residents because of proposed improvements at the curve was corrected.

Everyone had good intentions, Mrs. Woodward said, but the county neglected to consult with the Citizens Advisory Committee and residents.

She said county officials informed the committee that no road widening will be implemented in the near future without input from area residents.

"I found the county has been very honest," Mrs. Woodward observed.

Noting that improvements are needed on Scenic Road, she said, "It's a minor road carrying major traffic.

"To keep widening with sandbags and asphalt is rather ghastly."

However, Mrs. Woodward said traffic problems cannot be solved at Carmel Point "without solving the problem elsewhere."

She noted that the parking congestion in Carmel must also be resolved.

Bargain hunt sale is today

The Episcopal Church Women will hold their annual Bargain Hunt sale Thursday, September 4 from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. in the Parish House of St. John's Chapel. The chapel is located on Mark Thomas Drive and Sylvan Road in Monterey.

Proceeds from the sale will support missionary programs both at home and abroad, with special interest to the needs of the Monterey Peninsula.

Items on sale are in good condition. Included are clothing for the entire family, antiques, art supplies, new hard-cover books, including paperbacks, magazines, record albums, and Christmas decorations and toys.

An interesting part of the sale will be the Collector's Corner, devoted to items of special interest for the avid collector. This corner includes gold and silver antique jewelry, furs, silk hand-knotted fringed shawls, old copper and brass items, silver coffee service, French gingham lined baskets, old linens and laces, and a collection of very old Spanish combs including tortoise and beaded combs.

Household items such as area rugs, a large decorative chest of drawers, many mattresses and springs, and houseware items and electric appliances will also be available. The garden section will feature clay pots.

Supervised parking and a nursery will be available. A snack bar will also operate throughout the day.

Valley parents look for way to help troubled youth

By STEVE HELLMAN

A COMMUNITY DRIVE to provide crisis aid and long-term support to families in Carmel Valley received a solid and fervent boost last week.

More than 60 persons crowded into the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center to discuss a family intervention program, primarily aimed at diverting local youth away from misguided behavior and crime.

On hand were representatives of several Monterey Peninsula counseling agencies, a juvenile division detective from the Monterey County Sheriff's Department, the county juvenile court judge, county chief probation officer and an unexpected number of Valley parents. Several young persons also attended.

The county officials and family counselors hailed the turnout as a vital step within the community toward addressing the needs of its youth.

Many of the parents joined together in venting frustrations over what they said is the lack of recreation for Valley youth, the lack of support between parents and the need to form a collective base of support for families down to individual block organizations.

The meeeting was called in the wake of a recent rash of teen-age crimes, and while parents and officials agreed on the need for a program to divert hard-core youth offenders away from the juvenile justice system, the overwhelming consensus at the meeting was for an intervention program that will reach children before they turn sour.

Solutions were suggested ranging from a community hotline for parents and juveniles, to a massive outdoor bike riding park, more jobs for youth, parent advocacy, a Big Brother and Sister program and constructive competition for youth from chess clubs to soccer leagues.

Parents emphasized that the need was urgent for direct attention to family problems in the Valley. The counselors and county officials pledged professional backing for whatever program the community chooses.

Based on the outpouring of ideas and positive discussion at the meeting, a second meeting was called, with many parents declaring their intent to stay with it until a program is established.

A public meeting is scheduled for 8 p.m., Wednesday, Sept. 10, at the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center, Ford Road, to hammer out specific programs and discuss costs and sources of funding.

"I DIDN'T come here to deal with just the few troubled kids," Richard Hawkins declared.

A psychologist and family counselor for the Carmel schools, Hawkins said his primary concern was for the many children with a potential for trouble.

"I'm talking about whom we can help before they get into trouble," he said. "That includes my kids."

He called for a program that will provide support for parents who are unsure of the guidelines for raising children.

"To reach the problems, we need to find a support system for parents," Hawkins said.

CLAUDIA DANIELS, a counselor with the Cypress Institute in Monterey, also pointed to the need for family advocates.

"First and foremost," she said, "we need to break down the alienation. We need people who can reach out to families with kids who've gotten into trouble."

Family advocates are primarily people who are good listeners, she explained, people well informed on local agencies and how they operate, people who can help families through the system.

"Advocates are supportive, friendly and, most importantly, they are non-judgmental," she said. "They're not like lawyers or judges, but just a friend."

The first step for the community is to decide what specific issues it wants to address, Ms. Daniels said. Advocates can then be trained to approach those issues.

An 18-hour training course is enough to initiate a family advocate, she added.

A youth diversion program that had proven highly successful in Compton was outlined.

CHRIS CAMPBELL, who lives in the Valley, described the program she had participated with in Compton, next to Watts in Los Angeles.

She said the program targeted youth offenders who were referred by the city after a complaint had been filed.

Instead of being processed through the courts and probation department, the youths were diverted into the federally-funded program, Ms. Campbell explained. The program had five to six projects for children. One of the most successful involved the use and maintenance of mopeds, she said.

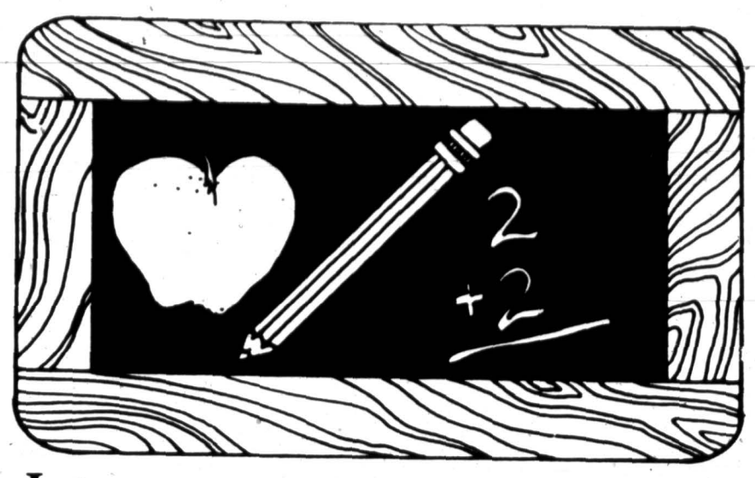
"We took kids out on weekends, kept them busy," she said. "It was a healthy outlet for their energy. It did wonders."

The youths were phased out of the program after several weeks. Other projects included jobs and intensive counseling.

The major drawbacks to the program, Ms. Campbell noted, were: (1) Youths come into it only after committing a crime and being processed by the police and probation ("By then it was often too late to reach them.") (2) Parents were not involved enough.

"The counseling was much more directed at the children," she said, "while the breakdown patterns in the family were not addressed."

She suggested that any program established in the Valley involve parents immediately in counseling and support services.



JUVENILE COURT JUDGE Edward Leach discussed the role of the courts, acknowledging that with a community program the courts would be much less needed.

He said that half the youths cited by the Sheriff's department and referred to the Probation Department do not end up in court; they are generally channeled to an agency or private counselor.

The half who have a complaint or charges filed against them are brought to court for what Leach termed as one purpose — coercion.

"First we determine if the government has the right to interfere in the child's life," he said.

The finding might be that a court decision is not called for, and the offender is referred back to probation, he said.

For the youth offender who is tried, however, the action may range from a mild consequence like counseling to removing the child from his home or straight confinement, Leach explained.

"The court doesn't prevent crime," he said. "We are there for coercion, to hold down the spread of crime, to make the child accept responsibility for his actions."

Leach insisted: "If you can get the cooperation of a community to address the needs of its youth, you don't need the court."

DONALD FARMER, county chief probation officer, said the turnout at the meeting was not only encouraging, but a healthy sign that the community wants to solve its problems.

"Anything that you can do will help us in our work," Farmer said. "This year we face the loss of two probation officers with the lack of funds."

His best advice to parents was to stay away from the corrections system.

"We're a necessary part of government," he said, "but an intervention program will catch the problem at a much earlier stage."

The first-time offender, like a youth caught in petty theft, will not receive that much attention from the Probation Department, he explained.

"It is critical to intervene in family lives to avoid the path of crime," he said.

JUVENILE DETECTIVE Joe Ancini outlined the three options for a sheriff's deputy when a juvenile is caught violating the law.

Most often the offender is counseled on the street and released. He said, "It's very often the best thing to do if they're young and the incident is minor."

In other cases, the deputy might issue a citation and the juvenile is referred to the county Probation Department.

"If the case is serious," Ancini noted, "the youth is taken into custody, confined at Juvenile Hall and ordered into court."

A serious case is either one attributed to a serious felony or a repeated violation, he said.

Ancini said that according to one diversion program proposed by the Sheriff's Department in conjunction with the City of Salinas, it was estimated that 63 percent of the cases processed through the courts could be handled instead by a community diversion program.

MARSHA SMITH, a psychiatric social worker who attended the meeting, told this newspaper afterward of a successful program that she was involved with in San Jose that could be applied to the Valley.

"It was a program that dealt mostly with minority youth," she said, "but the ideas are pretty applicable to problems here."

The city-run program received referrals for youths in their first offense, she noted. A program in the Valley could be based on earlier intervention.

"Where schools often notice first that a child is tired or distressed, they can refer them to the program," she said.

The program would rely on parents and other residents volunteering time each week to be advocates for each other.

'If you can get the cooperation of a community to address the needs of its youth, you don't need the court.'

"Neighbors can help neighbors," Ms. Smith said. "It just takes a lot of trust."

Junior Achievement projects could be provided to the youths, she said. "Kids develop and work on a product then go out and sell it. Christmas decorations, candles, sewn goods, wood-working," she said. "The local lumber yard could sponsor a Junior Achievement program."

Ms. Smith said she has the sewing skills and time to teach girls and boys.

"If the room and facility is there," she said, "all it takes is the volunteer to do it."

CARMEL MISSION Basilica was first named Mission San Carlos Borromeo del Rio Carmelo when Father Junipero Serra moved his missionary work from Monterey to the banks of the Carmel River where a rude shed originally served as a church. Though the Spanish friar died in 1784 before the adobe mission was completed, he left a community of Indian farmers and craftsmen. (Photo from the Pat Hathaway historical collection)

Churches reflect early days in Monterey area

Sunday church-goers may find themselves attending services on the sites of some picturesque early-day church history on the Monterey Peninsula.

Senior church, of course, is San Carlos Cathedral, first Christian edifice in the area. But when Father Junipero Serra founded it in 1770, second in the chain of California missions, it was just a rough shack.

It was some years later that skilled workmen were brought from Mexico to build the beautiful structure whose present-day Monterey address is 550 Church St. It is considered one of the finest examples of Mexican architecture in the United States.

When Father Serra chose a new location for his mission, in 1771, San Carlos became the Royal Presidio Chapel to serve the soldiers stationed at the fort, the Presidio of Monterey. It later was called San Carlos Church until Monterey became headquarters for the multi-county Diocese of Monterey, when it was designated a cathedral.

Today's Carmel Mission Basilica was dubbed Mission San Carlos Borromeo del Rio Carmelo when Father Serra moved his missionary work to the fertile banks of the Carmel River. Like the original of San Carlos, the forebear of the present-day Basilica was a rude shed.

Although the little Spanish friar left it to his successors to build the mission on Rio Road, Carmel, and now restored to its original appearance, he did found on the site a thriving community of Indian farmers and craftsmen. And he had removed the Indian maidens from the presence and influence of the Presidio soldiers.

The early Yankee traders, in California under Mexican rule, discovered that while they need not swear allegiance to the government, they must embrace the Catholic faith if they wished either to own land or marry a dark-eyed senorita.

Since most of them wished for these two desirable states, most of them likewise conformed to the condition. There developed among seasoned merchants a piece of advice to first-time clipper-shipmates: "Leave your conscience at Cape Horn."

So it was not until the acquisition of California by the United States that American freedom of worship replaced the Spanish expansionist policy of conquest, conversion and colonization.

Although Walter Colton, first American alcade or mayor of Monterey—he had been a chaplain aboard one of the ships in the United States Pacific squadron which bloodlessly took California for the United States — was a Congregationalist minister, he did not practice this profession during his years in office.

But the completion of one of Colton's projects, the construction of a town hall, the still-extant Colton Hall named for him, coincided not only with the state's first constitutional convention but with the gold rush of 1849.

That year the Rev. Samuel H. Willey, a Presbyterian-Congregationalist minister, came ashore from the ship California and alternated with a Catholic priest as chaplain at the constitutional convention. Later in the year he established a Presbyterian Sunday school in Monterey, the first organized Protestant service in the state.

Fatefully, that was the year of the arrival of David Jacks, a staunch Presbyterian immigrant from Scotland. With his later ruthless obsession for the ownership of land — he once held title to nearly the entire Monterey Peninsula — he was to become one of the most hated and feared personalities ever to contribute to the colorful and turbulent history of the area.

Jacks volunteered to teach a Sunday school class for the newly-activated Presbyterian organization. Not ordinarily one to let Sunday's religious principles interfere with Monday's business dealings, he nevertheless developed a shrewd scheme to capture attendance records week after week.

When he offered a nickel, a substantial sum to a child in mid-19th-century, to each person attending his class, the word spread like wildfire. Across town at San Carlos Church, services concluded earlier. The small Catholic children raced each other to David Jacks' class. And the nickel!

But the first actual non-Catholic church building was St. James Episcopal Church, a tiny frame structure just wide enough for its front facade to accommodate a door flanked by a pair of windows. Erected in 1876, it had long since been outgrown by its congregation by the time Urban Renewal in Monterey threatened its further existence. Mayo Hayes O'Donnell, a noted chronicler of local history and active in the Monterey History and Art Association, bought the church and had it moved out of the path of the bulldozer. It is now a memorial library which bears her name.

The Presbyterian congregation built its first church in 1890 on the corner of Franklin and Pacific Streets, Monterey. A new, more adequate structure was put up in its place in 1914, then in 1961 another church was erected at 501 Eldorado St., and the original site with its handsome building was sold to the Church of Religious Science.

Worthy of note is El Estero Presbyterian Church at Pearl and El Estero, Monterey, which has predominantly Japanese-American communicants. The oldest such congregation on the West Coast, it is approaching its centennial.

Although Pacific Grove was founded in 1875 as a Methodist retreat, church services were conducted outdoors at Lovers of Jesus Point—now shortened to Lovers Point—and it was again an Episcopal congregation which constructed the first church building, beautiful little St. Mary's by-the-Sea.

Modeled after a Gothic church in Bath, England, the structure was such an architectural gem that when the time came to enlarge it, the congregation decided against adding non-harmonious wings. Instead, the building was cut in two and the two halves moved apart to allow for an extension in between.

The first church within the city limits of Carmel was the Church of the Wayfarer, Methodist, serving the entire Protestant community for some time. Frank Devendorf, early developer of the village, donated two lots for the building, a generous gift in 1902 when the plot was valued at $500.

Until the church was completed in 1905, summer services were held under a big tree; in inclement weather, they were held in the loft of a barn. The residents of Carmel, regardless of faith, donated the Wayfarer's bell, which is still in use. In earlier times it also signaled fires and other emergencies. Landscaping includes a unique biblical garden planted with flora mentioned in the Bible or found in Palestine.

Another venerable Pacific Grove landmark is the First Christian Church, built in 1895 and recently restored to its original appearance, including chandeliers with the appearance of being candle-lit. With perhaps pardonable pride, the congregation points out that the redwood building is the oldest intact church in Pacific Grove and has not been altered, as has St. Mary's.

The original All Saints' Episcopal Church in Carmel is now that town's city hall, on Monte Verde Street. The newer All Saints' is a larger building on Dolores and Ninth.

St. John's Chapel, another Episcopal church on Mark Thomas Drive in Monterey, was built to accommodate guests at the old Del Monte Hotel, now the Naval Postgraduate School. St. John's was moved back from its original site to make way for the freeway portion of Highway 1.

Only 4 days of kidhood left

Jason Lindgren, 5

Showing some real kid power, Ian Wilder Dice, 5, of Lupin Lane in Carmel Valley will be entering kindergarten at Tularcitos School Sept. 8.

So long, Mom! They're startin' kindergarten

By JOANNE HODGEN

THE FIRST DAY of kindergarten.

It can be a time of tears and excitement as mothers deposit their well-scrubbed youngsters in a classroom to face an uncertain future.

When the doors swing open Monday, Sept. 8, Ian Wilder Dice will enter Tularcitos School in Carmel Valley while Jason Lindgren attends Carmel Woods School in Carmel.

Though neither 5-year-old has set eyes on the other, each one had a similar interest in playing. However, Jason and Ian had different expectations for the first day of school.

ASKED WHAT he expects to learn in kindergarten, Ian said confidently: "You don't learn anything in kindergarten. Second and first grade you learn stuff."

Jason said he will learn how to make things, although at this time, he would rather play.

Neither youngster is wet behind the ears when it comes to school-time experience.

Both attended nursery school, where Jason said he listened and made things like "Halloween stuff, pictures and pumpkins."

When Ian was asked what he did in preschool, he said, "First you go outside and then you go in. Sometimes I even had lunch outside."

"It sure is good," he beamed, adding, "I have lots of friends."

A free spirit, Jason appreciates the freedom afforded him at school. "You can do anything you want to at school," he insisted.

JASON SAID he plays with a number of children now, and Tye is his best friend.

Freeze tag is his favorite game. "The person who is 'it' has to tag the others who freeze," Jason explained. "I've played 'it' before," he said.

Among his favorite sports are baseball, basketball and soccer. Soccer becomes a family event when Jason and his dad fend off his brothers.

There is a definite advantage to being on his father's side.

His dad usually wins, he said.

Ian succinctly stated that the only sport he enjoys is baseball because he is "pretty good."

Describing his playing tactics, he said, "Sometimes I'm out and sometimes I'm safe and sometimes I hit the ball right out of the sideyard and right out by the airport and it lands in one of my friends' yard."

JASON AND IAN admitted they cannot read, yet.

However, Ian expressed an avid interest in books, especially Richard Scarry stories. "I love those," he said.

"They have animals and stuff doing jobs. They have so many mice and pigs. It's filled," Ian explained.

Among the many books that Jason has enjoyed is The Frog Man and the Onion Seller, about "looking for treasure," he said, adding, "my dad reads stories to me."

Jason and Ian will arrive at their respective schools by different modes of transportation.

For Jason, it will be his first ride in a school bus. "I think it will be like riding in a car," he explained.

Ian, who only lives a block from school, will walk. He bemoans the fact that his friends all ride the bus. Ian said he must walk to school alone.

Ian is still uncertain about the first day of school.

"Maybe I'll just stay home the first day," he contemplated.

Jason said he thinks the first day will be "fine."

AN EERIE SCENE by Pacific Grove photographer Emmy Reese is included in the Friends of Photography Annual Members Exhibition through September 15 at Sunset Center, Carmel. Seventy-two photographers are represented in the collection of color, black-and-white photographs and made by alternative processes.

Hitchcock thriller to open festival at Sunset Center

The Broadway Theater Film Festival at the Sunset Center in Carmel will open its doors with the Hitchcock thriller Dial M For Murder Tuesday, September 9 at 8 p.m.

Sunset Center has selected ten of America's renowned Broadway plays featuring some of the most acclaimed actors and actresses of our time. The center brings this series to the community as part of a continuing program of encouraging participation in and appreciation for the film arts.

Dial M For Murder was first presented in America at the Plymouth Theater in New York City on October 29, 1952. Maurice Evans, a well-known Shakespearean actor, played the role of Tony Wendice. There's no mystery to Dial M For Murder but the identity of the villain. Tony has made up his unscrupulous mind to murder his wife, and never has the theater seen a more suave, devious, and dastardly blackguard. A society playboy, Tony fears divorce and disinheritance from his wealthy wife, and subsequently arranges her murder. His plan backfires, however, and she, instead, slays the assassin in self-defense.

Hitchcock's uncanny use of the color camera plays on the mounting fear and nerve-cracking tension as the husband cunningly weaves a web of seeming guilt which would convict his wife of deliberate murder. Ray Milland assumes the role of Tony, the husband, while Grace Kelly and Robert Cummings take the other principal parts.

Films will be shown the first Tuesday of every month through June. Upcoming Broadway classics will be Cabin in the Sky, October; The Spiral Staircase, November; Lili, December; Bell, Book and Candle, January; The Great Waltz, February; Gaslight, March; The Merry Widow, April; Laura, May; and Seven Brides for Seven Brothers, June.

A season ticket for the ten films to be presented this year is still available for a savings of $10. Individual tickets at the box office are $2. Series tickets are also available on the night of the performance.

Sunset Center is located at Ninth and San Carlos, Carmel.

GRAND DUKE++, a purebred Arabian owned by Ouroboros Arabians of Carmel Valley, will be exhibited in the Stallion Parade at the 12th annual Half-Arabian Horse Show, Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 6-7 at the Monterey County Fairgrounds. "Duke" is the sire of top-winning purebreds and Half-Arabians.

Half-Arabian horses to compete at fairgrounds

Exotic Arabian horses, manes and tails flowing, their riders often clad in spangled, sequined costumes, will compete Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 6-7 for the 12th Half-Arabian Horse Show at the Monterey County Fairgrounds. Arabian horse lovers from throughout the U.S. are expected to turn out for the annual event. Show times will be at 7:30, 1:30 and 8 p.m.

A total of 70 classes are planned. Competition in six of the classes will be especially stiff, as they are limited to those horses who have won a first or second place in shows sponsored by either the American Horse Show Association or International Arabian Horse Shows.

The beauty of the horses and the lavish Arabian dress of the riders make the event a colorful spectacle.

The half-Arabian horse is not "half horse," but a horse sired by a purebred Arabian stallion out of a mare of any other breed. Popular crosses are Arab-Morgan (Morab) and Arab-Thoroughbred (Anglo-Arab). Half-Arabians are frequently paints and pintos or "spotted horses," eligible for separate registration and competition in special "color classes." Half-Arabian horses are known for their variety, color and versatility under saddle and in harness.

One of the oldest breeds, the Arabian horse is universally recognized for its beautiful "dish face," tiny muzzle, high-arched neck and flowing mane and tail.

Its bloodlines carefully preserved for centuries by desert sheiks, the Arabian horse was exported on a limited basis after the Crusades. The breed left an immediate mark on the horses of the world and is directly responsible for the creation of the English (and American) Thoroughbred.

The show is sponsored by the Arabian Horse Association of Northern California and staged by its affiliate, the Gold Coast Arabian Horse Association.

Prize money will be offered for the first time this year.

Judge for the event will be Carol Chapman of Boerne, Texas.

The Monterey County Fairgrounds are at Fairgrounds and Garden roads, Monterey.,

Admission is free and everyone is welcome. For further information, phone 372-9005.

Sunset Gallery to display landscape print collection

Landscape Prints from the 17th century to the present will be on view Monday, September 8 through October 2 at the Marjorie Evans Gallery of Sunset Center in Carmel.

This selection of 23 works is from the permanent collection of the Augusta Richmond County Museum of Augusta, Georgia. There are 16 etchings, 2 color aquatints, 2 color woodcuts, 2 lithographs, and an exception, a drawing in brown ink on bond paper by the late Hereward Lester Cooke.

Other artists represented are Cezanne, Claude Lorraine, Hokusai, Signac and Tiepolo. All landscapes, 18 of this group, were shown in Augusta under the title Cabinet Des Paysages, to commemorate completion of the first phase of a large museum renovation project. Five prints were added to round out the traveling version of the exhibition.

A catalog was published on this collection, the text of which was prepared by Linda Lowry Peters. She has written, "The artistic styles range from the European Baroque and 18th Century Neo-classicism to French Neo-Impressionism and American Regionalism and Realism. That includes many 'isms' and several appear to have little in common stylistically; however, the theme of landscape is the common thread and each print is a portrait of a place. The printmakers are celebrating the countryside offering their interpretation of the scene to the viewer."

This is an excellent opportunity for the viewer to judge the merits of the well-known artists as opposed to those of the lesser-known given a specific theme to use as a basis for judgment.

The hours of the gallery are each weekday from 9 to 5 p.m. There is no admission charge.

The Hidden Valley Musical Theatre Orchestra will present a concert of chamber music Thursday, Sept. 4 at 8 p.m. at the Kelley Gallery, 251 Alvarado Mall, Monterey.

Organized by Mark E. Watters, the director of Hidden Valley's Musical Theatre Orchestra, the concert will present the following pieces: Vocalise by Serge Rachmaninoff, a Romantic work transcribed for solo trombone with piano accompaniment; a Brahms Clarinet Trio for clarinet, cello and piano; Hungarian Dances by Bela Bartok, short Hungarian pieces for solo violin with piano accompaniment; Seven Popular Spanish Songs by Manuel de Falla, featuring Velvali de Ayxa, the soprano vocalist who plays Eliza Doolittle in this season's production of My Fair Lady at Hidden Valley, with piano accompaniment; and Igor Stravinsky's neoclassical Octet for Winds, conducted by Bill Wright.

The Thursday evening concert will be open to everyone, followed by refreshments served by Doubletree Inn of Monterey. The concert will also be broadcast live by KUSP FM 89 Radio-Santa Cruz.

Admission is free. For more information, call the Kelley Gallery at 649-4282.

Broadway Theater Film Festival features screen classics

By RICHARD TYLER
Director, Sunset Community and Cultural Center

THE FIRST EVENT of the fall season in Sunset Theater will be the presentation of Dial M for Murder, the first in the series of the Broadway Theater Film Festival.

In the fifth year of filmed stage presentations, we have selected 10 of America's outstanding mystery and musical favorites featuring casts of some of the most acclaimed actors and actresses of film. Listed below are the films and dates of presentation.

On Tuesday, Sept. 9, at 8 p.m. Dial M for Murder will be shown. A society playboy fearing divorce and disinheritance from his wealthy wife arranges her murder. However, his plan backfires and she, instead, slays the assassin in self-defense. Hitchcock's uncanny use of the color camera plays on the mounting fear and nerve-cracking tension as the husband cunningly weaves a web of seeming guilt which would convict his wife of deliberate murder. Ray Milland, Grace Kelly and Robert Cummings star in this production.

On Tuesday, Oct. 14, Cabin in the Sky, directed by Vincente Minnelli, will be shown. A superb all-black cast highlights this story of the Lord and the devil struggling for a gambler's soul. They include Ethel Waters, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, Lena Horne, Louis Armstrong and Duke Ellington and his orchestra.

On Nov. 11, The Spiral Staircase will be shown. This mystery is a suspense tale of murderous obsessions which takes place in a small American community in the early 1900s. Dorothy McGuire, a mute, works as a servant to Ethel Barrymore, the bed-ridden mistress of a stately mansion. A series of murders has been committed, the victims all handicapped. Miss Barrymore is positive Miss McGuire is next.

Lili will be shown on Dec. 9. Joining a carnival puppet show, shy French orphan Leslie Caron becomes infatuated with magician Jean Pierre Aumont, who keeps his marriage to Zsa Zsa Gabor a secret for "business reasons." Miss Caron becomes part of the crippled puppeteer's (Mel Ferrer) act and eventually comes to love the deep sensitivity behind the puppeteer's cynical facade. The stage version was called Carnival.

Based on the John Van Druten's smash Broadway hit, Bell, Book and Candle, the Jan. 13 offering tells of a conventional bachelor "bewitched" on the eve of his wedding by his beautiful blond neighbor. Starring in this film version are James Stewart, Kim Novak, Jack Lemmon, Hermione Gingold and Elsa Lanchester.

Feb. 10 The Great Waltz will be shown. This lavish biography based on the life of Johan Strauss authentically reproduces the festive opulence of 19th century Vienna. The film traces the life of the composer to his moment of triumph when he presented the Blue Danube Waltz at the 1872 World Peace Jubilee. The film stars Horst Buchholz, Mary Costa, Nigel Patrick and Rossano Brazzi.

March 10, Gaslight, directed by George Cukor, is on tap. He also received an Academy Award for his direction. This film also gained Ingrid Bergman her first Academy Award. Extraordinary performances and moody photography lend authenticity to this chilling story about a husband's diabolical scheme to drive his wife insane. Also starring are Joseph Cotten and Angela Lansbury.

April 14 The Merry Widow will be shown. Directed by Ernst Lubitsch, it stars Jeanette MacDonald and Maurice Chevalier and tells the story of a dashing officer who must entice back from Paris a rich young widow whose lavish spending will keep her country solvent. It is a merry, witty musical.

Otto Preminger's first critical and commercial success, Laura, screened on May 12, is one of the most enduring of all film noirs. Against David Raskin's unforgettable romantic musical score, a methodical detective (Dana Andrews) investigates the murder of a beautiful advertising executive/femme fatale (Gene Tierney) only to have the victim turn up alive. Still, the intriguing mystery takes a back seat to the trenchant dialogue and one of the screen's most memorable characterizations, that of Laura's mentor, Waldo Lydecker (Clifton Webb), a cynical commentator who types in the bath and delights in shredding his fellow men with malicious wit. Webb's performance is the indelible center of this corrosive but utterly civilized portrait of jealousy, frailty and greed.

And what better way to close the season than with a rousing, dance-filled musical, Seven Brides for Seven Brothers on June 9. Perky Jane Powell marries backwoodsman Howard Keel and then finds out she has to keep house for his six brothers as well. But the brothers decide to kidnap wives of their own. The film features the screen's most spirited and athletic choreography.

A season ticket admitting the purchaser to all 10 films is only $10. Admission to individual films at the door is $2.

Sunset Center is bringing this series to the community as part of its continuing program of encouraging participation in and appreciation for the film arts. Tickets may be purchased by mail by sending a check and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Sunset Theater, P.O. Box 5066, Carmel 93921, or at the director's office at Sunset Center during the week. Series tickets will also be available at the box office on the night of the opening of the series. For further information, call 624-3996.

CONTINUING OUR TRIP around the world in search of festivals, may I suggest the following:

The Aarhus Festival Week in Denmark through Sept. 14; the Bruckner Festival in Linz, Austria, throughout the month; the Joust of the Saracen, knights in armor tilting contest in Arezzo, Italy, Sept. 7; and the Belgrade Theater Festival in Yugoslavia until Sept. 13.

Backgammon

by Alfred Sheinwold

KEEP OPPONENT BUSY

You, White, roll 4-1 in the diagrammed position. How do you play it? (Since you have accepted a double earlier in the game, the doubling cube is on your side of the table.)

It may seem automatic to take the four from your mid-point and the one from your 10-point to make your 9-point; or to make your 4-point with a four from your 8-point and a one from your 5-point.

The trouble with either move is that Black threatens to make his 4-point or his 9-point. You would like to make his 4-point or to hit his blot on the 9-point, but you can't do either.

Your best bet is to keep Black busy by hitting him on your own 1-point. Since he must use half of his next roll in coming in, he will have much more trouble making his 4-point or his 9-point than if you left him alone. In the meantime you may get another chance to make his 4-point or hit his blot.

Would you like to have Alfred Sheinwold teach you how to play backgammon? A 12-lesson booklet will be on the way to you when you send 50 cents plus a stamped, self-addressed, No. 10 envelope to Backgammon, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1000, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053.

Conductor brings magic to Cabrillo Music Festival

By SCOTT MacCLELLAND

FOR NO OTHER REASONS than to show off orchestral virtuosity and to exit in a blaze of color, the 18th Cabrillo Music Festival of Aptos came to an end last Sunday with Zoltan Kodaly's Dances of Galanta.

It was a fitting conclusion. Kodaly was represented on no other program, which is only significant because of the festival's traditional alignment to specific composers, this year Antonin Dvorak, Dave Brubeck and "The American five" (so called): Ives, Cowell, Rugles, Riegger and Becker. And also fitting because conductor John Nelson proved again that music and magic are, or ought to be, sisters.

The 18th Cabrillo was an odd mixture of are and ought to be both in performance and programming. The range shifted between mediocrity and excellence, between ho-hum and authentic excitement. But through it all emerged a festival with its own character, unlike any that preceded it. The casual charm of Brubeck, the ballyhooed but vague influence of "The American Five," the up-tight intensity of conductor Daniel Lewis, the galvanic authority of John Nelson, the easy confidence of pianist Maria Teresa Rodriguez and the no-nonsense mastery of violinist Sergiu Luca configured to shape and flavor the programs designed by a music director who—so sorry—couldn't be present.

VIOLINIST KEN HARRISON, one of the festival's charter participants, hosted the Prelude Concert on Thursday, Aug. 21, in Aptos' Resurrection Church, a notorious echo chamber of the sounds of Highway 1.

Two Brubeck pieces were heard: Reminiscences of the Cattle Country, in a tasty testament by pianist Emily Wong, and a Eugene Friesen arrnagement for four cellos of Tritonis, a new work. Brubeck himself was on hand and offered his own tribute to Duke Ellington. A Lou Harrison piece, Threnody for Carlos Chavez, was played under the composer's direction on the Gamelan Degung with viola soloist Susan Bates. Two excellent composed works, the witty Mockery by John Becker and Study in Sonority by Wallingford Riegger, were conducted by Daniel Lewis, who had to start the latter a second time because of a siren passing by.

The Bagatelles for strings and harmonium by Dvorak was the charming conclusion to a program that clearly illustrated the festival's directions.

THE ORCHESTRA concert of Aug. 22 at Cabrillo Theater opened with Il Vitalino Raddoppia by Hans Werner Henze. Concertmaster Romuald Tecco was soloist in this lengthy but finely wrought set of variations on the Vitali Chaconne. The orchestra sounded excellent under Daniel Lewis. Brubeck, Ray Bachand and Michael Willens formed the jazz trio featured in Brubeck's Brandenburg Gate Revisited, a set of variations orchestrated by Howard Brubeck and conducted by Russell Gloyd. The piece was played with polish and flair and had the character and often the sound of Michel Legrand film music. Daniel Lewis returned to lead a driving but superficial reading of the Symphony No. 6 in D by Dvorak. The work's weaknesses rose as the first movement meandered without purpose and the over-long finale expressed no Bohemian sentimentality.

SATURDAY, August 23, was an evening program of new dance, film and music.

Alvin Curran made the music for Small Circles, Great Planes, a film/dance by Molly Davies and Sage Cowles. The film/dance presented about five minutes of ideas and then murdered them with 60 minutes of repetition. On every level the ideas were stimulating, the dances most of all, but the artificial contemplations imposed through such a length of time dispelled any notion of talent or artistic discipline among the collaborators.

In contrast was an amusing stage work by Margaret Fisher and Charles Amirkhanian. The title, Egusquiza to Falsetto, was taken from a volume of an encyclopedia which Amirkhanian tried to reflect through vocal and instrumental utterances cast over the ambient sounds of the ocean and a mountain stream. The setting was a campsite and the musicians entered the stage with blankets, and each in turn curled up on the floor. Fisher put them through various posturings and abrupt movements and the whole was rather zany entertainment.

The evening ended with Tongues, an excessive but stimulating work for speaker and orchestra by Charles Shere. The piece is a kind of concerto for the nonsense syllables of the bizarre religious fascination called tongues. Andrew Hoyem gave what must have been a definitive recitation, and the Arch Ensemble was conducted by Robert Hughes.

THE SUNDAY concerts at San Juan Mission were unqualified successes.

Dave Brubeck's Fiesta de la Posada was a delightful retelling of the Christmas story with great idiomatic sensitivity to the Mexican posada. Brubeck mixed his own jazz into it with subtlety and exuberant flavor. Featured were El Teatro Compesino, the San Mateo Masterworks Chorale and soloists Luana de Vol, Daniel Parkerson, Marc Accornero and John Miller. Galen Marshall conducted.

That evening, also in the mission church, John Nelson made his first appearance conducting the Dvorak Requiem. The work is lengthy and not a little long-winded in spots, but Nelson played to all its strengths and the realization was high-profile excitement. The San Mateo choir was outstanding and the orchestra was at its best. Nelson led the way with burning purpose and intense drama.

THE NEXT ORCHESTRA concert, last Friday, saw Daniel Lewis on the podium at Cabrillo Theater.

He directed the Othello Overture by Dvorak in a rigid and tense reading that allowed no mystery and little musical drama. Maria Teresa Rodriguez then played the Piano Concerto by Carlos Chavez, a driving work full of motor rhythm and colorful effects. Lewis' tension was well suited to the piece and Rodriguez proved a powerful advocate and musician. Lewis returned to lead the Symphony No. 2 by Charles Ives in a brisk and deliberate presentation whose humor and sentiments were contained in a tidy concentration of musical values.

LAST SATURDAY'S orchestra concert focused on the Americans.

Don Gillespie opened the evening with a discourse on John J. Becker, an outspoken proponent of new music in the Midwest in the '20s and '30s. Becker's music revealed that he was better with musical ideas than as a composer, but his works were refreshing and his efforts were signal if lonely. Becker founded the first St. Paul Chamber Orchestra in the early '30s, and a program he did in 1933 was reproduced exactly in Saturday's concert, conducted by Ken Harrison. Before that program, however, the orchestra played the West Coast premiere of Becker's dance-play When the Willow Nods, a 1940 opus. Good ideas abounded, but transitions were weak and episodes were related more choreographically than musically. The reproduced program included works by Cowell, Ives, Riegger, Ruggles and, again, Becker, and the playing was first-rate.

MARIA TERESA RODRIGUEZ played an excellent recital Sunday afternoon at Watsonville's All Saints' Church.

Her program included Ravel's Tombeau de Couperin and Chopin's Sonata No. 3 in B Minor, both loudly acclaimed by an enthusiastic audience, and seven piano pieces by Chavez, rarely heard miniatures that reflected jazz, Debussy, polyphony and those characteristic rhythms so typical of Chavez' individual style.

SUNDAY NIGHT witnessed the finale to the festival.

John Nelson returned with his unmistakable command to lead a sparkling and vivacious reading of the Berlioz overture Beatrice et Benedict. The Dvorak Violin Concerto did not begin as well as it became later. Sergiu Luca was a bit unfocused at the start and the dialogue between soloist and conductor also took time to ripen. The slow movement was kept light and, at last, the finale was animated and engaging.

Henry Cowell's Symphony No. 14 was then given its West Coast premiere and it was a marvelous amalgam of effects, colors, sonorities and craftsmanship. While it was loaded with percussion instruments, they were used with consummate skill and never got out of proportion to the remainder of the orchestra.

At last were the Dances of Galanta and an irresistable finish to another surprising Cabrillo Festival. Special credits go to Ken Harrison, Romuald Tecco and Lou Harrision for their influence in keeping the festival's purposes clear and the music-making consistantly excellent in the face of so many different personalities.

Dennis Russell Davies will be back next summer for the entire festival.

Scott MacClelland is classical music director for KWAV-FM 97.

OPEN AIR MASS and blessing of the fleet will open the Santa Rosalia Festival Sunday, Sept. 7, after the beautiful statue of the patron saint of Italian fishermen is carried in procession to Custom House Plaza at Fisherman's Wharf in Monterey. The procession begins at 10 a.m. from the Y.M.C.A. building, El Estero Lake, with bands, floats, and marching units. During the afternoon homemade Italian food will be sold on Custom House Plaza, with entertainment for listening and dancing.

Santa Rosalia celebration honors patron saint of Italian fishermen

A tribute to Santa Rosalia, the patron saint of Italian fishermen, and the blessing of the Monterey Bay fishing fleet will be celebrated at the annual Santa Rosalia Festival Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 6-7 in Monterey.

The traditional celebration, sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Italian Heritage Society, blends the "fishermen festival" of the turn-of-the-century commercial fishing industry and the "blessing of fishing boats," begun in 1935 when a statue of Santa Rosalia was given to San Carlos Cathedral in Monterey.

Born in the 12th century, Rosalia dedicated her life to poverty and prayer until her death on September 4, 1166. Four centuries later, as the black plague ravaged millions throughout Europe, she appeared in a vision to a citizen of her Sicilian birthplace, revealing that if her remains were carried through the streets, the town would be saved.

The village was spared and the fishermen of Sicily began an annual tribute. By 1624, the Pope had entered her name on the roll of saints.

Festivities will begin Saturday with the Santa Rosalia Coronation Ball in the Serra Ballroom of the Monterey Conference Center, 1 Portola Plaza, Monterey. The semi-formal event will begin at 6:30 p.m. with no-host cocktails; dinner will be served at 7:30; and dancing will continue until 1 a.m. The cost is $27.50 per person.

The Italian-American community of the Peninsula will continue celebrations Sunday with a full day of festivities including parades and musical entertainment.

The Santa Rosalia parade will begin at 10 a.m. at the Armed Services YMCA, El Estero and Webster, and proceed to the Custom House Plaza at Fisherman's Wharf. Colorful floats, bands and marching units accompany the beautiful statue as it is carried along the Alvarado Street parade route.

At the Custom House Plaza, the Most Reverend Bishop Harry Clinch will celebrate an outdoor Mass at 11 a.m., during which the queen of the Festival will crown the statue of Santa Rosalia with a wreath of flowers.

Following Mass, fishermen carrying the statue will lead the procession to Old Fisherman's Wharf where Bishop Clinch will conduct the traditional blessing of the fishing craft and sportsmen's boats. The queen will then lay a wreath of flowers in the bay in memory of fishermen lost at sea.

For the rest of the day the Custom House Plaza will come alive with the hum of visitors as they sample the wares of booths offering Italian delicacies including calamari, pizza, spaghetti, canolli and Italian pastries.

A costume judging event at which two prizes will be awarded in each of three categories for the best Italian folk costume will also be held. The categories by ages are: children 12 years or younger; teenagers 13 years to 17 years inclusive and adults 18 years or older.

21st Artichoke Festival scheduled in Castroville Saturday & Sunday

They say that the heart is the best part of the artichoke, and Castroville is the heart of artichoke country. Lovers of the leafy vegetable should not miss the 21st Artichoke Festival in this city on Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 6-7.

The 15-square mile area 14 miles north of Monterey known as the "Artichoke Capital of the World" has more than 8,500 acres cultivated with the pointy green vegetable.

There is plenty to see and do at the festival this year: an art fair, the Artichoke Queen Coronation Ball, a 10-kilometer run through artichoke fields, a flea market, a parade, marching bands, musical entertainment, barbeques, even a horseshoe tournament.

For the first time, artists from all over California will be represented in an art fair Saturday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The ten-kilometer run through the artichoke fields is a favorite on Saturday, too, and all jogging enthusiasts are invited to join in the race at 10 a.m. A $5 entry fee will entitle the runner to an artichoke T-shirt and prizes which include cases of artichokes. Advance registration will be held at Fleet Feet, 831 S. Main St., Salinas. Registration on Saturday from 8 a.m. to 10 a.m. is $6.

The Artichoke Queen Coronation will follow that evening at the Community Center. No-host cocktails will be served from 6-8 p.m.; and music and dancing to Jam Pax rock 'n' roll will last until 9 p.m., when a break in the action occurs as the contestants for the Artichoke Queen are introduced. They are judged on knowledge of artichoke history as well as personality and appearance, as the 16-18-year-olds are each asked a question about the history of artichokes. The dancing resumes at 10 p.m. and goes full swing until midnight. Admission for the dance is $5 per person.

Early on Sunday morning, the Castroville Fire Department will heat the grills for the annual Pancake Breakfast. Included in the meal is a hearty helping of pancakes, eggs, bacon and hot coffee for $2.50 per person.

Also on Sunday a flea market will begin at 8 a.m., lasting all day long.

At 11 a.m., the Artichoke Parade will march off down the main street of Castroville. The Grand Marshall this year is Steve Magar, the vice president of Monterey Savings and Loan, who has been active in youth groups in the area for some time. Floats, marching bands, and an appearance by Louis Cabral, actor and stuntman, along with his trained animals, are promised.

He will drive the refurbished old wagon ridden on by the Artichoke Queen.

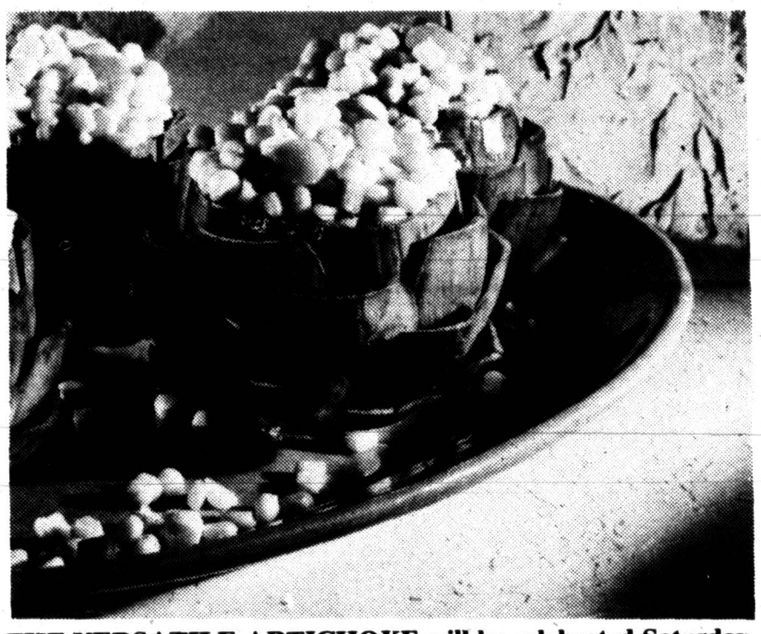
Another new event is slated for this Sunday. Ten top flight horseshoe players will compete for the first prize of $1,000 at 12:30 p.m. At 1:30 p.m., there will be a Bocce Ball tournament; and at 2:30 p.m., parade awards.

Festivities will then expand to the grounds surrounding the Community Center when the Castroville Rotary Club heats the grills and serves 1,000 in a chicken barbecue from noon to 5 p.m. Cost for the meal is $3.50.

The Watsonville Band, bellydancers, and Country Western music will put the mayonaisse on the artichoke by providing entertainment all day long both days.

The Castroville Community Center is located on the corner of Pomber and Crane, 14 miles north of Monterey off Highway 1.

For more information on the festival, phone Andy Ausonia, 1-633-3371 or Larry Bailey, 1-633-5202.



THE VERSATILE ARTICHOKE will be celebrated Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 6-7 at the 21st Annual Artichoke Festival in Castroville, the artichoke capital of the world. Festivities include live entertainment, dancing, the crowning of the Artichoke Queen, the 10km Run for the Artichokes, a parade, and a chicken barbecue.

Channel 8's Kiwanis Auction slated Sunday

KSWB-TV Channel 8 will broadcast the 11th Annual Kiwanis T.V. Auction Sunday, Sept. 7 from 4:30-7:30 p.m. Over 100 items will be on sale, including automobiles.

All proceeds from the auction, sponsored by the Monterey and Salinas Kiwanis Clubs, will benefit charities.

For more information, phone Jim Fernandes, publicity chairman, at 443-3900.

Senior golfers tee off September 9

The 37th annual State Seniors Golf Tournament will tee off Tuesday and Thursday, Sept. 9 and 11 at Monterey Peninsula Country Club, Club Road, Pebble Beach. A practice round is scheduled for Monday, Sept. 8.

Two hundred seventy-two golfers are expected to turn out, 136 from Northern California and 136 from the south of the state. The competitors, ages 55-90, are divided by handicap in the 36-hole tourney.

Defending champion is William Colm of Monterey Peninsula Country Club.

Play will begin at 8 a.m. and last until noon each day. Spectators are welcome.

Monterey Peninsula Country Club is located on Club Road in Pebble Beach. For further information, phone 373-1556.

Douglas L. Downing riding "Maybe Tomorrow"

RANCHO LAURELES EQUESTRIAN CENTER is delighted to announce that Douglas L. Downing has joined us as Manager and Resident Instructor.

Doug comes to Rancho Laureles from Bell Canyon Equestrian Center in Canoga Park, where he served as riding instructor and assistant manager for four and a half years.

He is already known to some members of the local equestrian community for the dressage clinics he offered through the Carmel Valley Chapter of the California Dressage Society (CDS) for the past several years.

Although Doug now specializes in dressage, he was a successful Three-Day Event rider at the Preliminary Level and is equally qualified to teach basic equitation and jumping. Children and beginners are just as welcome and as comfortable training with Doug as adults.

A NATIVE OF SAN JOSE and a graduate of UC Davis, Doug began his riding career with the Blue Hills Pony Club. In addition to eventing, he rode with the Los Altos Hunt. His Fourth Level dressage horse, "Maybe Tomorrow," was Reserve First Level Horse of the Year (CDS) in 1974 and qualified for Second and Third Level Horse of the Year in 1977 and 1978. Doug is a student of U.S. Equestrian Team dressage rider Hilda Gurney and has ridden with many international dressage coaches.

Lessons are by appointment. Fees are $15 per hour private, $10 per half hour; $12.50 per hour semi-private and $10 per hour small group (3-6). Outside riders and horses are welcome.

We have a limited number of school horses available for lessons and will be adding more. Please phone and we will do our best to accommodate your individual needs.

...and

WHILE WE'VE GOT YOUR ATTENTION, we are pleased to announce that our deluxe new barn is complete!

Each 12 x 12 box stall has its own 24-foot outdoor paddock. All stalls have foot-cushioning rubber floor mats, automatic waterers, feeders, mangers and blanket racks. The barn includes two spacious tack rooms which will offer private tack lockers. Our new wash rack has hot water to pamper your horses!

We've also added a 75-foot lungeing arena and a 150 x 275-foot dressage arena. Our jumping arena has been leveled and re-fenced and a sprinkler system is soon to come.

Spacious turn-out paddocks and lots of handsome new fencing complete our latest improvements.

OUR AIM CONTINUES TO BE to provide "home away from home" care for your horse and cater to his comfort and individual needs.

Regular care includes safe, clean paddocks and box stalls, generous feedings of top-quality hay, bran, salt and clean water. The results are amazing: even rundown, positively skinny horses pick up and begin to bloom within a month!

To top it all off, we've got the nicest bunch of people you'll find anywhere, and there's always companionship for a wonderful trail ride through Garland Ranch Regional Park, a few miles around our half-mile track or assistance with a jumping or dressage problem.

WE ARE NOW ACCEPTING RESERVATIONS for our new barn and there are a limited number of pipe paddocks available.

Why not plan a drive out into the Carmel Valley sunshine soon to see what we're doing? We'd love to show you around!

Easy access to Garland Park with its 541 acres of trails and open space!

Wine and food: culinary delights

By ROBERT LAWRENCE BALZER

IT IS AN indisputable fact that the level of cuisine in America took a great leap forward in the '70s.

Master chef Paul Bocuse not only received the Legion of Honor from President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, he was honored by dozens of countries, made the cover of the New York Times magazine and other leading newsmagazines. With his friends and fellow chefs Jean Troisgros and Roger Verge, public appearances and dinners made la nouvelle cuisine a well-known American household term.

Gourmet magazine, which had claimed the gastronomic readership territory almost alone for more than a quarter of a century, gained new rivals in Bon Appetit, Food & Wine, Cuisine and the monthly journal of that phenomenal food processor, the Cuisinart, Carl G. Sontheimer's Pleasures of Cooking. Gourmet societies and cooking classes thrived all across the land. Time magazine gave a cover story to the editorial evolution of the New York Times which aimed new emphasis to lifestyles accenting gastronomy, with Craig Claiborne the indisputable leader.

Cookbook king James Beard could hardly keep up with requests for personal appearances and culinary classes. People stood in line all night to insure places in the cooking classes of Rita Leinwand in Los Angeles. Julia Child became a national institution.

Along with all of this dramatic emphasis on la nouvelle cuisine, wine consumption continued statistical growth, less exciting in per capita consumption, but healthy in volume of sales in spite of rising prices. As in the culinary arts, newsletters and magazines devoted to wines and vines thrived, wine tasting groups were formed, clases conducted in big cities and colleges reached new heights of enrollment.

Robert Mondavi became an impresario for not only musical groups at his handsome Oakville winery in the Napa Valley, but as host to the nation's most elegant culinary classes under the direction of Michael James. The marriage of wine and food is an elegant and happy one, thriving even in these times of recession.

TWO BIRTHDAY parties I attended within a week, one in Hollywood, at the renowned Scandia, and another in Spokane, in a friend's home, were up against heavy competition in my gastronomic scan. I had begun that week in Chicago, lucky enough to be among the diners at Le Francais in Wheeling, just north of the city, where the best food on this planet is being served by maitre cuisinier Jean Banchet. In Playboy magazine's June issue ranking of The Top 25 of America's greatest restaurants, the favorites of 120 renowned restaurateurs, chefs, gourmets and food writers, Le Francais ranked second to Lutece of Manhattan. The latter is superb, but in my opinion, Banchet's miraculous talent outshines anything in a lifetime of dining. It is pure sorcery, beautiful to the eye, memorable to the palate, nourishing without being overwhelming. But back to our birthday parties.

The gathering of friends in the Scandia wine cellar celebrated the 66th birthday of host George Reese, motion picture exhibitor par excellence. With 11 guests, I began our luncheon with 1969 and 1970 Bollinger Blanc de Noir Champagne from the old vines. Black and shining sturgeon caviar from the Sacramento River catch was a prize gift to begin the luncheon (the game fish and its roe cannot be sold). A double consomme brunoise, with Scandia-made 18-inch-long cheese sticks, served with Duff Gordon's amontillado, led to the rack of baby lamb with potatoes Anna, garnished with concaise tomatoes and golden-crisp eggplant, served with three great wines: 1961 Lafite-Rothschild, Latour and Mouton-Rothschild.

Three first-growth wines, of the same year, all from the commune of Pauillac, but of vastly different style. It was the time to relax and let each grow in its glass, expand its aromatic reach to the ultimate complexity. And they did.

The diners were vocal in their appreciation of these big wines, but there was no synthesis, no universal agreement about their ranking. No contest. All were at their peaks of development, Latour being the most forceful, Lafite the most complex, and Mouton-Rothschild the most subtly seductive. With fresh white peaches, a deep golden 1921 Chateau d'Yquem gained a harmony only to be topped with a fine champagne cognac from the cellars of the Tour d'Argent. Splendid, professionally served.

NEXT I FLEW to Spokane for the 40th birthday of a wine-tasting colleague, neurologist William Bond. With his wife, Marcia, they offered a "dinner for six with wines by Robert Lawrence Balzer" for a charity benefit. The winning bid of $750 would go wholly to a local charity, as the happy bidders would come to dine — the chef, Marcia Bond, the sommelier, Dr. Bond.

With disarming ease, Mrs. Bond prepared a six-course dinner in a matter of hours. We watched as the terrine of pate was whizzed together in the mixer, put under a gelatine glaze and decorated with truffled diamonds and vegetable flowers, served with crisp cornishons and Bond's sourdough bread batons, with Taittinger brut champagne. A 1978 Trefethen Napa Valley white riesling, more languidly Californian than German in style, made wonderful harmony with fresh shrimp, glistening with a subtle lemon-oil dressing, for dunking in small tureens of tomato-base sauce. Picture perfect.

Cream of artichoke soup came on hot and aromatic with Chalone 1978 pinot blanc redolent of French oak in bouquet. Morsels of pink poached salmon reposing on oak-leaf lettuce, with quartered red peeled tomatoes were sauced with Marcia's own invented sauce of reduced stock, egg yolk and lime juice, making no competition with the 1974 Mayacamas Napa Valley chardonnay, a wonder-wine! Long gone from the market, it underscored the meaning of the private wine cellar, Bond's pride and joy.

Tenderloin of pork, roasted with a red currant glaze, sliced in thin medallions, garnished with steamed flowers of broccoli and slices of zucchini, brought forth Chateau Mouton-Rothschild 1970, a velvet soft, gloriously cabernet breed.

Dessert? Fresh poached pears, ladled over with a puree of fresh red raspberries, accompanied by Long Vineyard's 1978 Johannisberg riesling from Botrytised grapes in late harvest picking.

I've watched the American food and wine scene for better than 40 years. It hasn't been easy to get here, but we're here, with these new patterns of elegance, both public and private, which I know would gladden the heart of the late Andre L. Simon, founder of the Wine & Food Society, whose great aim in life was to see the arts of good living thriving with broad acceptance.

Luxurious, of course, but celebrating moments earned with equal dedication.

AMERICAN TRADITIONS CONTINUE...

When was the last time you dined with a menu that featured Old-Fashioned Pot Roast, fresh roasted Tom Turkey, Roast Leg of Lamb, Crown Roast of Pork and Roast Ribs of Prime Beef? Did you select mashed potatoes, oven-browned potatoes or fluffy rice to go with your gravies? Remember the hot freshly-made rolls!

Were your choices for vegetables broccoli or eggplant casseroles, spinach souffle, or buttered fresh carrots, turnips, asparagus spears, banana squash, crook-neck squash, green beans or zucchini?

Did you have a hard-to-get California Chardonnay or perhaps a vintage California Cabernet, Pinot Noir or Zinfandel?

When it was time for dessert, did you select the chocolate fudge cake, the pecan pie, or was it peach, boysenberry, blackberry or rhubarb pie? Did you succumb to the chocolate mousse, the caramel custard or the peach melba?

Finally, an Old Port or a Muscato Amable? Was the last time Thanksgiving Day?

ELIZABETH KEATINGE, a board member of Carmel Art Association, has exhibited her watercolors at San Francisco Museum of Art and Oakland Museum. She began her career experimenting with pastels in 1906.

NASTURTIUMS, a watercolor by Elizabeth Keatinge, is included in a show of her work through October 1 at Carmel Art Association, Dolores and Sixth, Carmel.

Elizabeth Keatinge to open exhibit

The vibrant watercolors of Elizabeth Keatinge will be on display Thursday, Sept. 4 through October 1 at Carmel Art Association, Dolores and Sixth, Carmel.

The watercolor painter is a current board member of the Carmel Art Association who studied at the California College of Arts and Crafts, where she received instruction from Eliot O'Hara N.A.; George Post, A.W.S.; and Jade Fon, A.W.S.

She has exhibited her work at the San Francisco Museum of Art and the Oakland Museum, and is a member of the Oakland Art Association.

At the age of 95, Elizabeth still finds much joy and pleasure in her painting. She began in 1906, experimenting with pastels and then finding watercolor.

"I like watercolors because they are fresh, vibrant and express your feelings and emotions. That is the important thing. It should be an expression, not a recording. Artists are not cameras. The brush is only a tool for expression, and the subject matter is the object of the inspiration. There are no set rules for the creation of a painting. It is a personal matter between the artist and his subject matter and it cannot be regulated by rules and methods. The feeling comes from within the artist."

When she is not painting, Elizabeth works in her garden where she finds much of her inspiration.

The museum is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. every day.

For further information, phone 624-6176.

Carmel Foundation displays Hofsas paintings

The paintings of the late Jean Ager Hofsas will be on display at the Carmel Foundation during the month of September. The exhibit will hang in the gallery of the activities building, Lincoln and Eighth avenues, Carmel.

The late Jean Ager Hofsas (1922-1979) was a native Californian who painted and taught during the major portion of her lifetime. She taught locally in Carmel, Monterey and Salinas, and for three years at the Presidio of Monterey and Fort Ord Arts and Crafts Centers. She was also an instructor in the Salinas Adult School.

According to Richard Puckett, Fort Ord Arts and Crafts Director, Jean Hofsas was one of the most outstanding and productive art instructors he has worked with in his twenty years at Fort Ord. She was an enthusiastic and inspiring instructor. Her personality was admired by all who were fortunate enough to have known and studied with her.

The painter studied at the University of Washington and with many renowned artists throughout her years in the arts. Her work was constantly changing and growing, always fresh and contemporary. This showing will represent a variety of works demonstrating the style changes and development of a woman who established herself in a very creative and productive career in the art world.

During her life, Ms. Hofsas had many one woman shows, Seattle, Honolulu, Carmel Valley, Monterey, Seaside and Salinas. Her work is in many private collections in the United States and Canada.

Everyone is welcome to attend. Hours at the Carmel Foundation are weekdays, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and 2 p.m. to 5 p.m., Saturdays and Sundays.

For further information, phone 624-1588.

Moesle exhibit at Museum of Art

Paintings by Robert Moesle and works from the Flagg Family Foundation Collection go on view Saturday, Sept. 6 and continue through Sept. 28 at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art.

The museum is located at 559 Pacific St. in Monterey. Hours are Tuesday through Friday 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and weekends from 1-4 p.m. Admission is free.

Robert Moesle was born in San Jose, where he studied at San Jose State College and received his BA in art. He continued his studies for three years at the Ruskin School of Art, Oxford University, England.

Moesle is currently living in France and has painted European landscapes for the last 10 years in watercolor.

On dislay will also be another facet of his work — figure paintings — very different in style which he calls, "the other side of Robert Moesle."

His exhibitions include: The California Palace of the Legion of Honor, San Francisco; St. Hilda's College, Oxford University, England; 5th Annual Old Testament Art Show at Long Beach Museum; Triton Museum of Art, San Jose; and the 25th Annual San Francisco Art Institute Drawing Show.

The museum has received a long-term loan of 23 works by mostly California artists from the Flagg Family Foundation. A selection of these works by such artists as Richard Diebenkorn, David Park, Mark Tobey, William Dole and William Wiley will be on the balcony during September.

Shaped for every wrist.

SLOT MACHINES MUST GO

A police drive on all illegal slot machines and gambling devices was recommended by the Carmel city council at their monthly meeting held Wednesday.

According to City Attorney Argyll Campbell, there is a strong state ordinance affecting slot machines. Campbell explained that some of these machines which deliver merchandise with each coin placed are legal while those in which money is used and no merchandise is obtained are against the state law.

The council empowered Campbell to accompany Chief of Police Gus Englund in an inspection of all slot machines in operation here. Those that Campbell found to be illegal would be seized and the owner warned.

BIG ENROLLMENT INCREASE MARKS SCHOOL OPENING

Those carefree days of vacation are over. School bells are ringing again in Carmel. The first week of school is over today and the youngsters are quickly falling in line with their new class work.

Three hundred and one youngsters enrolled Tuesday at the Sunset Grammar school. The enrollment, the largest in many areas, shows an increase of 81 pupils over last year.

COUNCIL SPLIT ON TV TRANSFORMERS

At last night's city council meeting three councilmen were eager to give the Alarm Corporation (Cable TV) permission to place their transformers on the city's streets in boxes disguised as benches.

The three councilmen were deferred from immediate action only by the legal detail that they did not have the power to act. The TV people, when their franchise was granted by another council three years ago, were required by ordinance to place their transformers underground. The ordinance will have to be replaced and a new one written before the eager ones can "give away the looks of the town" to a private corporation which finds it can operate more profitably on the public streets than under them.

PLANS UNVEILED FOR CARMEL PLAZA EXPANSION

Plans for a large shopping plaza adjacent to Carmel Plaza in downtown Carmel were presented Monday to the Planning Commission for study.

The complex will occupy the present Carmel parking lot bounded by Junipero, Seventh and Mission and add approximately 30 shops to the city business area. The area is being developed by Douglas Glinden of Hillsborough, who has had interests in such properties as Yankee Stadium and the former Kansas City Athletics baseball team.

Poets meet Thursday

Peninsula poets Gary Cooke, Levi Lemberger, Bill Minor and John Schatz will read their poetry Thursday, Sept. 4 at 7:45 p.m. at the meeting of the Monterey Peninsula Writer's Club. The meeting will take place in the conference room of the First Presbyterian Church of Monterey, 510 Eldorado St.

There is no admission charge and everyone is welcome to attend.

Gary Cooke is a journalist and the author of a recent poetry book entitled Butterfish and Other Poems. Lemberger, who conducts The Writers Hour on radio station KAZU, has had his work published in numerous magazines. Minor is an instructor at Monterey Peninsula College who writes both poetry and fiction. Schatz, a physician, is the author of the poetry book Spaces for Spaceman.

FREE WANT ADS

For subscribers to the Carmel Pine Cone

A SPECIAL OFFER TO OUR VALUED SUBSCRIBERS

The Pine Cone is happy to be here and we always look forward to meeting our subscribers. As a gesture of our thanks for your continued support, we invite you to have a FREE WANT AD every week, in your paper.

HOW TO WRITE A WANT AD

List the classification you want your ad to appear under in the form at right. Then start your ad with the item you have for sale, etc. Be sure to include your phone number at the end. To make your ad effective, describe your item fully including such things as weight, size, color, age, condition, etc. It is best to list your asking price; this will eliminate calls from people who are not prospective buyers.

RULES:

Free want ads are for person-to-person sales only. Ads for businesses or real estate will not be accepted. Free ads must be written on this form only and delivered to our office by 3 p.m. Monday (no phone ads, please). Free ads are limited to 16 words. The Pine Cone is not responsible for errors in free ads. Limit is one ad per subscriber per week. To run the same ad the following week, a new ad on a new form must be submitted. Publisher reserves the right to refuse any free ad for any reason. Free ads must be placed in the following classifications: Antiques, Autos for Sale, Boats for Sale, Lost & Found, Misc. for Sale, Pets & Livestock, Special Notices, Wanted, Yard Sales.

This label is your ticket for a free ad and must appear here on any ad you turn in. Clip this label from the front page of your weekly Pine Cone.

OBITUARIES

Alice Small, 87

Alice McNeel Small, 87, a 23-year resident of Pebble Beach, died Aug. 17 in Community Hospital.

She was born in Kilbourn, Wis., daughter of a pioneer Wisconsin family.

She was a court reporter and legal secretary in Portland, Ore., for 20 years. She was the widow of Edward Hayes Small, a retired life insurance executive in the Northwest.

The couple moved to Pebble Beach from Seattle, Wash. in 1957. Mrs. Small was an active outdoorswoman and, with her husband, co-chairman for many years of the annual Sunset Magazine-Del Monte Properties home garden competition.

She leaves two daughters, Alice Jean Small of Seaside and Marylaird Wood, of Oakland, and four grandchildren.

A private memorial service is planned. Cremation was scheduled at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea, with burial at El Carmelo Cemetery in Pacific Grove. Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests memorials be sent to The Oceanic Society, Stamford Marine Center, Magee Avenue, Stamford, Conn. 06902, or to a favorite charity.

Mary Williams

Mary F.C. Williams, 80, of Carmel, a retired telephone operator, died Aug. 23 in Beverly Manor Convalescent Hospital.

She was born in New Rochelle, N.Y. She lived on Dolores Street between Seventh and Eighth avenues.

She leaves a brother, Vincent, of Tucson, Ariz.

Mass was said at San Carlos Cathedral, with burial in San Carlos Cemetery.

Mission Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

Rev. J. Busam

The Rev. Joseph F. Busam, S.J., 88, a biology professor for 40 years at Holy Cross College in Worcester, Mass., died Aug. 13 at the college.

He was born in Charlestown, Mass. He taught at the college from 1929 until his retirement in 1969. He was chairman of the department.

Ordained at Georgetown University, he was a member of the Society of Jesus for 69 years.

Survivors include a cousin, Mrs. Stanley Luke of Carmel.

Services and burial were at Holy Cross.

Eleanor Burke, librarian

Eleanor Esther Burke, 74, of Carmel died Aug. 19 at Community Hospital.

She was born in Big Rapids, Mich.

She was a beauty counselor for the Elizabeth Arden cosmetics company for many years before retiring and moving to Carmel 18 years ago.

She was the librarian for the First Church of Christ, Scientist, of Carmel for the last seven years.

There are no known survivors. No services were planned.

Cremation was held under direction of the California Cremation Society, with inurnment in El Carmelo Cemetery in Pacific Grove.

Arthur Mason, Marine general

Arthur Theodore Mason, 77, of Carmel, retired U.S. Marine Corps brigadier general, died Aug. 24 at Community Hospital.

He was born in Brooklyn, N.Y., and had resided in Carmel for 25 years.

He retired from the Marine Corps in 1954 after 31 years of service, including duty in India and China.

He leaves his wife, Mildred.

Cremation has been held at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea under direction of the Paul Mortuary. Ashes will be scattered at sea.

F. Aebersold

Florence Marilyn Aebersold, 54, a resident of Carmel for 30 years, died Aug. 27 in a Honolulu hospital.

Mrs. Aebersold, known as Micki, was born in Modesto. She came to Carmel in 1946 and, with her husband, Robert, owned and operated the Pink Elephant Liquor Store in Monterey and the Surf 'n' Sand drug store in Carmel.

She was active in the Community Hospital Auxiliary and the Little Bits Chapter of the Children's Home Society.

The couple retired to Hawaii in 1976.

Besides her husband, she leaves a daughter, Mrs. Sandra Wise of Carmel Valley; a son, Gary, of Carmel, and and two grandchildren. Another daughter, Susan, and a son, Jon Christopher, died earlier.

Cremation services have taken place in Hawaii. Local services are pending and will be announced later.

The family suggests memorials be sent to the Children's Home Society of California or the charity of the donor's choice.

Ann Gilgen, 58

Ann Gilgen, 58, of Pebble Beach, died Aug. 27 in her home.

She was the wife of Harold L. Gilgen, manager of American Savings and Loan in Monterey.

She was born in Dumas, Ark.

Cremation is planned at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea in Pacific Grove. Paul Mortuary is in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests memorials may be sent to the Heart Fund or to Community Hospital.

Stewart Giffin, combat hero

Stewart Shepherd Giffin Jr., 59, of Carmel, a real estate broker, former general manager of Del Mesa Carmel and retired Army lieutenant colonel, died Aug. 23 in Driftwood Convalescent Hospital in Monterey.

He was born at Fort Anador in the Panama Canal Zone and had been a Carmel resident since 1966.

After graduating from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, his 26-year Army career took him throughout the world.

He was wounded in the World War II Battle of Ardennes and received the Purple Heart, the Combat Infantry Badge and the Bronze Star Medal.

Afterward, he served in Bikini; Germany; in intelligence in Washington, D.C.; the Far East Command where he commanded a Partisan regiment during the Korean Conflict; Hawaii; the Special Warfare Agency at Fort Bragg, N.C., and in Vietnam, where he was awarded another Bronze Star, Combat Infantry Badge and the Air Medal.

He retired in 1969 as a lieutenant colonel after completing a three-year tour at Fort Ord and received the Legion of Merit.

He then became general manager of Del Mesa Carmel in Carmel Valley until 1972, when he resigned to enter the real estate field.

He leaves his wife, Carol; a daughter, Mrs. William C. Dowd of Pinehurst, N.C.; three sons, David, Stewart III and Michael, all of Carmel; two sisters, Mrs. Arthur Roth of San Francisco and Mrs. David A. Pardy of Goshen, N.Y., and a granddaughter.

The California Cremation Society is in charge of arrangements, with ashes to be scattered at sea. No services are planned.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the Mission Coast Lung Association or the donor's favorite charity.

Father Farrell's Wisdom

Fond memories of Father Mestres

By the REV. LARRY FARRELL

The invocation delivered for Eduardo Mestres, Carmel stonemason, at the blessing of his fountain in the Monterey Friendly Plaza

Eduardo was a character, a colorful personality, a unique citizen of the Peninsula.

His cousin, Father Ramon Mestres, was pastor of Monterey and Carmel for almost 40 years, from 1893 to 1930, and a real friend to me. He married my parents, baptized me, heard my first confession, gave me my first Holy Communion.

A relative of Father Mestres was automatically a friend of mine, and I remember well when he arrived in Monterey in the early '20s. I was entranced with his stories of his adventures in the Spanish Army in North Africa, in the mines of Canada and many humorous incidents he and Harry Downie, of happy memory, acted out at Jolon while restoring Mission San Antonio. I can still see in my mind's eye Eduardo in his late 70s discussing the Varsoviana and the La Joto at one of Harry Downie's barbecues.

California owes a great debt to Catalans, to Don Gaspar de Portola and many of the early Franciscan padres.

Eduardo was a Catalan and he always seemed to me to be a patron checking out the streets of Monterey, Carmel and Seaside as one of his colonial conquests.

CARMEL OFFERINGS

$ 70,000 Will buy you 40 acres of hillside view property off Palo Colorado Canyon. It's rustic and undeveloped but has views forever.

105,000 Will buy you ⅓ of an acre in Upper Pebble Beach on which to build your DREAM house. It is flat, covered with pine trees, and with a properly designed home you might well enjoy distant ocean views.

185,000 Will buy you a delightful condo in the High Meadow area just above town. This end unit gives you more privacy and better vistas than many other units. It doesn't have an ocean view but it isn't looking at the highway either — a lovely sylvan exposure. Features two bedrooms and two baths, fireplace, lovely kitchen. 1,400+ feet of living space.

525,000 Will buy you that Carmel home that you always wanted — the one that is within easy walking distance of town and the beach. South of Ocean on Camino Real. Features three-bedrooms, den, 3½ baths, living room, dining room, double garage, and lovely garden setting. Immaculate taste and decor are shown throughout. Some ocean view from upper floor.

525,000 Will buy you your very own Castle in the Sky in the upper end of Carmel Valley. On a 2½-acre site sits this unique and unusual home built with imagination and care. Two huge bedrooms with large, large baths adjoin the immense living room with a two-story open ceiling. Another bath, large kitchen, patios, fountain, and views are also included.

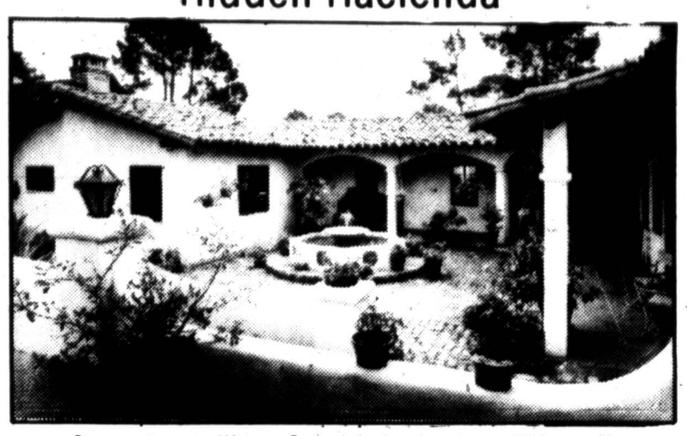
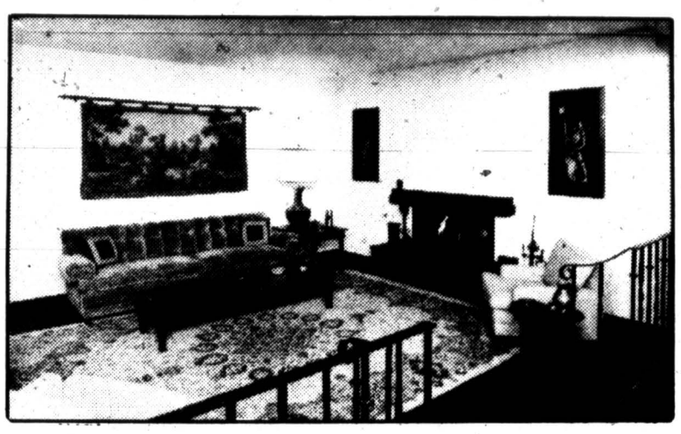
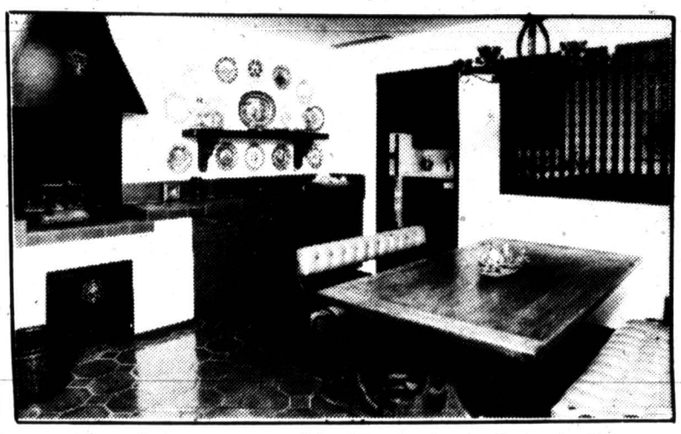
Hidden Hacienda



Sequestered, like a Spanish hacienda, within walls enclosing their large, sunny site at the end of a Carmel cul-de-sac, also built about a brick-paved, colonnaded courtyard with a fountain, are this enchanting home and an equally charming guest house.

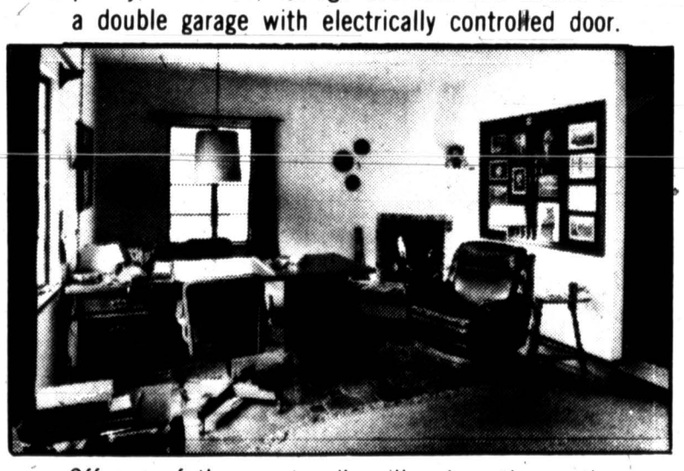


The parquet-floored living room, with a fireplace, is separated by wrought iron railings from a hallway off the tile-floored entry with a powder room.



The dining room, with tile floor, built-in buffet and metal-hooded fireplace, has a spindled grille through which is glimpsed a paneled breakfast room off the tile-floored kitchen with custom cabinets, tile counters, topline appliances, microwave oven.

Paneling, parquet floor, built-in desk, bookcases and cabinets are family room features. Completing the main house are a carpeted bedroom, an adjacent bath dressing area, also an adaptable hobby center and dark room area and laundry/utility room with a pantry, wall safe, storage cabinets and access to a double garage with electrically controlled door.



Off one of the courtyard's pillared porticoes, the guest house has a living room with fireplace, also a bedroom and bath. Central vacuum, floodlighting and security systems, two furnaces and water heaters, and insulation, are among many amenities adding to livability in this romantic home. $425,000.

3 BEDRMS, VIEW, NEAR CARMEL MISSION

The mountains and Mission Trails Park can be seen from 4 rooms. Two patios, large deck, 2 baths, double garage with EE opener, shake roof, wood siding. $229,500.

PEBBLE BEACH LOT—$99,500

90'x120' on El Bosque in Pebble Beach is ideal for a family home. It's located on a quiet street, loaded with pines, and a two-story house should get a glimpse of the lights of Monterey Bay at night.

4 BEDRMS., 3 BATHS, NEW, NEAR TOWN

This is a rather large, rustic contemporary home. There is an abundance of redwood throughout; it is most tastefully decorated. There is antique, stained glass from the architect's inventory. The home is difficult to describe — one must really see it. The price, $295,000.

LOT, SO. OF OCEAN NEAR TOWN—$122,500

This lot, on Torres between 9th and 10th, slopes into the pines and oaks in a greenbelt. We know of no less expensive lot this close to town.

2-BEDRM. OCEAN VIEW CONDOMINIUM, $210,000

This is one of the few High-Meadow Ridge condominiums that has a Point Lobos view. It has 2 bedrooms, 2 baths and an atrium. All rooms are large, and the home is most attractive. Reasonably priced at $210,000.

OCEAN VIEW HOME— NEAR MISSION

An outstanding two-bedroom, two-bath, large dining room, home on over a half acre, with a good ocean and Point Lobos view, as well as an exceptional view of Carmel Mission. This home is in excellent condition. $375,000.

QUALITY 3-BEDRM., 2½-BATH CARMEL HOME

View of the hills. Large, open-beamed ceiling living room has free-standing circular fireplace with tile hearth. Kitchen has ceramic tile floor and counter tops and a sunny breakfast nook. Large, finished garage with Genie opener now being used as a family room. Truly value-for-money at only $225,000.

3 BEDRMS., 2½ BATHS, VIEW, NEW, $229,500

This beautifully built home is almost in town. It offers unusual, tri-level living with a Point Lobos view from the master bedroom. There are 2½ baths and all the amenities one would expect in a new, architect-designed home.

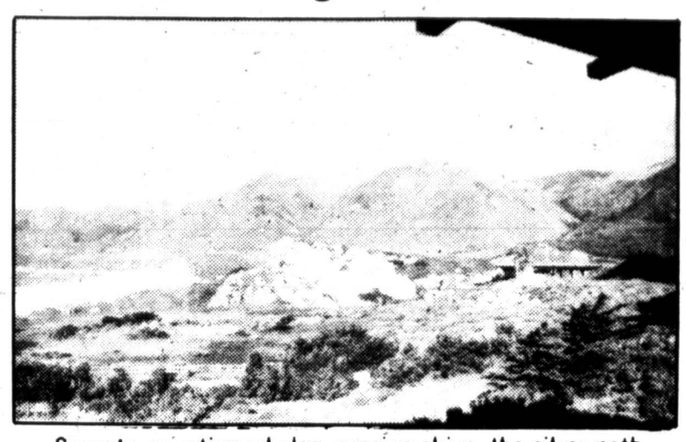
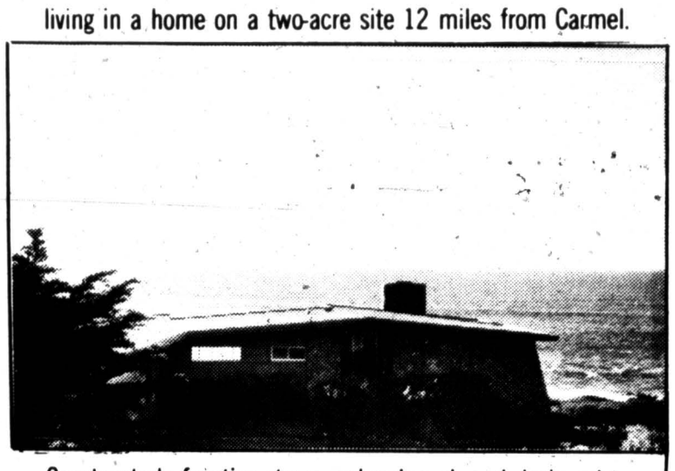
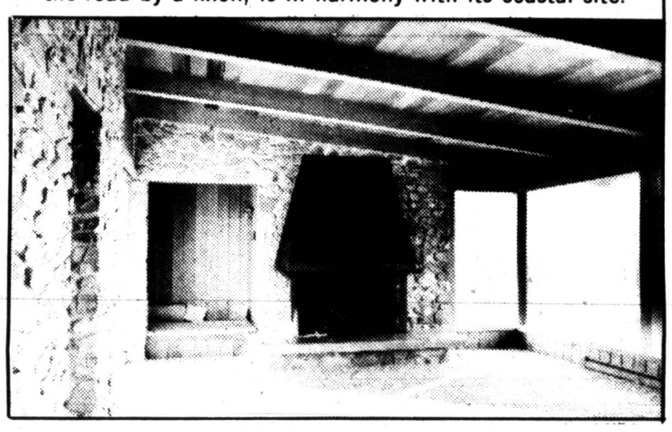
In Harmony With The Big Sur Coast



Sunsets, spouting whales, passing ships, the silver path of moonlight on the sea as well as surf surging along the mile-long length of Garrapata Beach and day-long changes of light on Big Sur Coast mountains, all are delights of living in a home on a two-acre site 12 miles from Carmel.

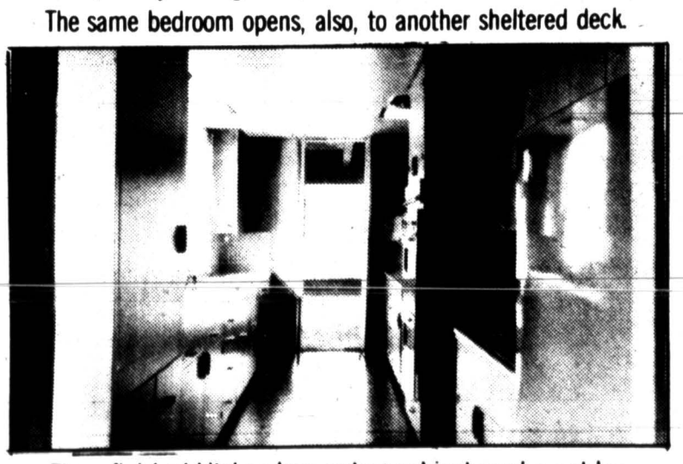


Constructed of native stone and redwood, and designed to complement a hillside setting, the house, sheltered from the road by a knoll, is in harmony with its coastal site.



Native stone, a metal-hooded fireplace, an inglenook and paneling and beamed ceiling of redwood are in the living room. Similar use of redwood enhances the entire inside.

Access to this glass-shielded deck is found in the living room, family/dining room, also one of the three bedrooms. The same bedroom opens, also, to another sheltered deck.



The refinished kitchen has custom cabinets and a wet bar. Included, also, in the 2,500 sq.ft. living space are two bathrooms and a solarium which opens to a sheltered garden with a fence-enclosed hot tub. Adding to livableness of this handsome home are both laundry and storeroom off the double garage with electric door control. New paint, inside and out, new carpeting, new wallpapers, a new roof and new and natural landscaping abounding in wildflowers are other assets of this Big Sur Coast property. $675,000.
